The Senate yesterday gave overwhelming approval to President Roosevelt's request for power to order the National Guard and Army Reserve units into immediate active service. The vote was 71 to 7.

A 39-to-38 vote defeated the amendment offered by Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, to limit service of the guardsmen and reserves to the United States and its possessions. As adopted, the resolution permits dispatch of the reserve troops to any point in the Western Hemisphere or the Philippine Islands.

With the Guard bill sent to the House, where it is expected to receive committee approval Monday, the Senate today will take up the Burke-Wadsworth conscription bill, considered certain to produce a long and historic debate.

Called up by Barkley

Majority Leader Barkley called up the measure before adjournment last night and followed through with a warning of six-day weeks for the Senate until action is taken on compulsory military training.

The final Senate version of the Guard bill includes an amendment introduced by Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, to permit any guardsman with a wife or child dependent on his civilian wages to resign from the service within 20 days after enactment of the measure.

[War Department officials last night said the amendment permitting resignations would cause only a "negligible" dent in the ranks of the guard. Details on Page 2.]

Pittman won passage of his amendment without dissent after he had threatened to support the Adams amendment if his proposal were not accepted. The Nevada Senator, as chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, had sponsored a Congressional resolution in June reaffirming the Monroe Doctrine, while the Adams amendment was attacked yesterday by Administration leaders as a major blow to the Monroe Doctrine.

Debt Relief Included

Another amendment, introduced by Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, and adopted by a voice vote, would guarantee the Guardsmen called into training private

Mystery Drama in the Skies

Plane Hostess Says Man Demanded Mail Key, Then Struck Her

A mystery drama involving a pretty airline stewardess and an unidentified man whom she accused of slugging her confronted Federal detectives last night.

Miss Rosemary Griffith, 24, late yesterday told how the man knocked her unconscious after demanding that she give him the key to the baggage and mail compartments, as a New York-to-Los Angeles sky-sleeper was flying at 10,000 feet on the leg from Washington to Nashville, Tenn.

"Give me the key or I will slug you," she quoted the man as saying.

Miss Griffith, blonde and blue-eyed, said she swallowed the key, and an X-ray exmalnation in a Nashville hospital confirmed this.

Struck On Head, She Says

The stewardess said the man struck her on the head while she was in the tiny ladies' lounge near the tail of the transport.

However, last night in Nashville, a postal inspector and a passenger on the plane said that Miss Griffith was found unconscious, not in the ladies' lounge, but in the baggage compartment which lies beyond this.

The plane was held in Nashville, and some of the passengers continued on to Los Angeles in another plane. With them went the cargo of mail.

House Group Speeds Child Refugee Bill

Slashing Red Tape

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

Temporary admission of scores of thousands of homeless European children to the United States would be made possible by a bill favorably reported by the House Immigration Committee yesterday.

Following hard on House passage Wednesday of a measure permitting American ships to rescue youngsters from the war zones, the bill approved in committee yesterday would allow from 100,000 to 200,000 young war refugees from all European countries to remain here two years.

The bill would authorize issuance of visitors' visas for the refugee children even though they are unaccompanied by adults and have their passage prepaid in this country—with the proviso that the Attorney General must be assured that they will not become public charges. The usual $18 head tax and visa fees would be eliminated.

Removes 'Discrimination'

Purpose of the bill, says the committee report, is to remove "the existing practical discrimination against children of certain nationalities who cannot get immigration visas because their national quotas are full, and who cannot get visitors' visas because they cannot prove a clear ability to leave the United States when the present emergency is over."

Chairman Dickstein of the Immigration Committee explained that under present law a refugee cannot get a visitor's visa if his nation no longer exists. Thus, Polish children who fled to Spain during the German invasion will not be eligible for visitors' visas unless the pending bill is passed—because they would have no homeland to return to.

Informed sources said yesterday that the bill would also have the effect of ratifying and authorizing extension of administrative action

Nation Asked To Support Sumners Bill

Junior Board Sends 1,000 Letters to Urge Backing for District Seats in Congress

Cool to Kennedy Bill

A District Plea

The Washington Junior Board of Trade yesterday launched a Nation-wide drive to obtain Congressional approval of the Sumners' proposal for national representation for the District. The organization sent more than 1,000 letters to affiliated associations requesting them to urge their Congressmen to support the bill.

At the same time, responsibility for Congressional maneuvering of the District representation resolution was taken by the author of the proposal, Chairman Sumners of the House Judiciary Committee, after a special Senate subcommittee dealing with the measure voted to take no action pending word from Sumners.

Representative Sumners announced that Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee and Representative Guyer, ranking Judiciary Committee Republican, will accompany him before the Rules Committee Tuesday morning to request prompt consideration of the resolution.

Announced at Luncheon

Announcement of the Junior Board's action was made at a luncheon meeting at which Paul Lesh, Washington attorney who has undertaken extensive studies of the voteless situation here, declared that national representation "would not take Washington from the Nation but would make it a part of the Nation." A portion of his talk was broadcast.

Signed by A. Z. F. Wood, president of the Washington unit, the letters urged that letters and telegrams be sent to members of Congress similar to the following:

"Please give your ardent support in obtaining the passage of the Sumners resolution, as originally introduced, or any other legislation designed to give the District of Columbia the right to vote for President and to elect its own Senators and Representatives in Congress."

Another voice raised yesterday in behalf of enfranchisement was that

Colonial Etiquette

Bermuda's Society Curtsies To Duke, but Not to Duchess

Matrons' Friendly Bow Sets Precedent As Windsors Arrive

By Morton P. Gudebrod
Associated Press Staff Writer

Hamilton, Bermuda, Aug. 8.—Two of the highest placed matrons of official Bermuda society, in welcoming the Windsors to Britain-in-the-Western Hemisphere today, curtsied to the duke but not to his American-born, twice-divorced duchess.

As pace-setters of the colonial social set, they apparently established the punctilio that will prevail: The bended knee for his royal highness, a friendly bow to the commoner duchess.

The women who thus made the to-curtsy-or-not-to-curtsy choice are Mrs. Hastings Brooke, sister of Maj. Gen. Denis Kirwan Bernard, Governor of Bermuda, and the wife of Admiral Sir Charles Kennedy-Purvis, commander of the Royal Navy's American and West Indies squadron.

There was, of course, no dreadful pause and the two women soon found themselves in animated conversation with the duchess, the former Wallis Warfield, of Baltimore, Md., for whom Edward VIII gave up a throne.

The American Export liner Excalibur, bearing the Windsors from Lisbon, Portugal, anchored off Hamilton in early afternoon.

The ship made a special stop here so the Windsors and their entourage could proceed more di-

The War Today

GERMANY STRIKES her mightiest air blow of the war at England, and hammers at Channel convoys and the British coast all day and night with an armada of 800 planes. Claims say 53 to 70 Nazi planes were downed, 34 British flying craft lost, and 72,000 tons of British shipping destroyed.

Shield Unbroken

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 8. — Mighty aerial invasion by 800 German planes was beaten back over the English Channel today in 14 hours of almost constant fighting in which at least 53 of the raiding Nazi craft were reported shot down.

[The United Press in a dispatch from London said authoritative sources had raised the estimate of German plane losses for the day to at least 70.

[In the fierce fighting of the day, the Germans claimed to have downed 34 British planes and to have sunk 15 British ships, with a total of 72,000 tons, in attacks on Channel convoys. This contrasted with a British admission of only 16 planes missing. The British, however, also admitted "several ships" in the Channel had suffered "considerable damage" and that a "number of survivors and injured had been landed."]

100 Nazi Fliers Killed

More than 100 trained Nazi pilots, observers and air gunners were declared to have gone down to flaming death in the British counterfire.

The Germans appeared in numbers unprecedented for this war, attacking over and over again all day long in forces of 80 each and loosing thousands upon thousands of bombs.

British fighter planes, meeting the greatest assault ever made on these islands, threw up for the mainland a shield which was not broken.

U. S. Studies Plan to Seize 'Frozen Funds'

Assets of Nazi-Held Nations May Be Kept To Apply on War Debts

Seizure of some of the foreign funds "frozen" in this country is being considered by the Government so that Americans will not be out of pocket if the World War debts go completely sour and if war in Europe destroys the bulk of United States investments there.

This disclosure, holding the first hope in many years that the United States might collect something on the $13,000,000,000 owed us by defaulting war debtors, was made at a press conference yesterday by Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr.

Simultaneously, it was learned that Senator R. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, plans to introduce a resolution in Congress permitting confiscation of the French assets frozen here, reported to amount to well over $1,000,000,000. His measure would put Congressional power behind the idea voiced tentatively by Secretary Morgenthau.

The Secretary's statement, his first intimation that the questions of war debts and the frozen funds were being linked, came when he was asked what he proposed to do with the assets of German-invaded countries that the United States is holding in "safekeeping."

In reply, the Treasury head said he wanted to "see what happens to American investments and debts over there."

Secretary Morgenthau had mentioned previously that the frozen

President Accepts His Resignation In Friendly Letter

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Postmaster General James A. Farley handed in his portfolio as a member of the Roosevelt Cabinet today, and a long political and official alliance between "Smiling Big Jim" and the chief he affectionately called "F. D." thus came to an end.

To the big happy Irishman who twice led his campaigns for the White House President Roosevelt sent an exceedingly friendly letter accepting the resignation, effective August 31.

Then he talked campaign issues with his new running mate, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace. The two appeared at a rally of New York women Democrats at which the Chief Executive smilingly said he and Wallace were going to keep on arguing "for the next four years" about the respective merits of Dutchess County corn and Iowa corn.

The President's short, extemporaneous talk to the several hundred women was made on the lawn of Mrs. Roosevelt's Valkill cottage. His listeners cheered.

The Chief Executive and Wallace drove off to a picnic. What specific issues they discussed were not disclosed.

105,000 More Men Needed to Bring Army to Maximum

Copyright by New York Times

The Army must recruit about 105,000 men in order to attain its authorized maximum enlisted strength of 375,000 men. The actual enlisted strength as of today is in excess of 270,000 men, an increase of approximately 95,000 men since June 30, 1939, when the actual enlisted strength approximated 175,000 men, or about 45,000 under the then authorized strength of 210,000 men.

A few days after the outbreak of the present European war, President Roosevelt issued a limited emergency proclamation authorizing an increase of the regular Army's enlisted strength to 227,000 men, a goal that was attained in a comparatively short period. When the Army appropriation bill for the fiscal year 1941 was passed, it carried a provision increasing the enlisted strength to 280,000 men. In the first supplementary Appropriation Act Congress again increased the authorized strength this time to 375,000 which is the goal the Army is today laboring to attain.

An Emergency Hospital ambulance took the boy to the hospital, where doctors said he suffered possible fractures of both lower legs, fractured left ankle and possible fractures of both feet.

18,000-a-Year Plane Output Seen by Jan. 1

10,800 Mark Reached; Defense Board Reports Progress in Rearming

The Defense Advisory Commission told the Nation last night that American airplane production has reached the rate of 10,800 machines yearly and by January 1 will be at the 18,000-a-year mark. The volume then "will increase steadily," it was said.

Supplementing a radio progress report in which all seven members of the commission participated, Jesse Jones, Federal Loan Administrator, announced that the RFC has committed itself to make loans of from $150,000,000 to $200,000,000 for new airplane factories. President Roosevelt's stated goal of plane production capacity is 50,000 a year.

William S. Knudsen, chief of the production divisioin of the commission, revealed the increase in the production rate.

75,000 Employed

"You might be interested in knowing," he added, "that in January 56,000 people were employed in aircraft factories. Today the number is near 75,000."

Denying reports that no contracts for combat planes had been awarded and assertions that expenditure of defense funds was lagging, Knudsen declared:

"The Navy, for example, contracted for $7,000,000 worth of combat planes in July. But more important than that is the overall picture. Take the money appropriated by Congress thus far

Mysterious Explosions Cause Destruction In 2 Munitions Works

By the Associated Press

Rome, Aug. 8.—Two unexplained explosions killed 39 workers and injured hundreds more today in the Tistenza Munitions Works near Genoa as Italian officials hailed successes in the African campaign.

At Lecco, on Lake Como, on the Swiss-Italian frontier, a later explosion in a munitions factory caused the death of three persons and injured six. The cause was not yet known.

The munitions plant near Genoa was almost demolished by the separate blasts that caused some destruction in nearby barracks and broke windows throughout the vicinity.

High officials left Rome hastily to investigate.

Meanwhile, officials here exultantly claimed that the Italian capture of the British Somaliland port of Zeila had opened the way to a consolidation of the British and French Somalilands under Fascist arms for an attack on Aden, Britain's protectorate 140 miles across the gulf of that name.

The incorporation of these French and British areas with Italian East Africa, it was declared, would give Italy a 2,500-mile continuous coastline along the Red Sea, the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean.

The strategy thus projected would be intended not only to break the vital British empire communications, but to obtain the two great riches of oil and cotton—oil in the

'For His Blessing on Our Country'

President Proclaims Sept. 8 As Day of Prayer for Peace

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—President Roosevelt has set aside Sunday, September 8, as a day of prayer when Americans of every creed and denomination should ask God "to grant to this land and to the troubled world a righteous, enduring peace."

"When every succeeding day brings sad news of suffering and disaster abroad," he said in a proclamation, "we are especially conscious of the Divine Power," and "it is seemly that we should" pray for God's blessing "on our country and for the establishment of a just and permanent peace" among all nations.

The proclamation, dated yesterday and made public today at the President's Hudson Valley estate, follows:

"The American heritage of individual freedom and of government deriving its power from the consent of the governed has from the time of the fathers of our republic been proudly transmitted to each succeeding generation, and to us of this generation has fallen the task of preserving it and transmitting it to the future. We are now engaged in a mighty effort to fortify that heritage.

"Mindful of our duties in the family of nations, we have endeavored to prevent the outbreak and the spread of war, and we have raised our voices against international injustice. As Americans and as lovers of freedom we are humbly sympathetic with those who are facing tribulation in lands across the seas.

Polish Flier Bags Two Nazis In First Time Up With R. A. F.

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 8.— A British Royal Air Force squadron leader and a Polish pilot in action with a British command for the first time in today's widespread air battles told graphic stories of combat far above the channel and British coasts.

The squadron leader, describing one fight, remarked that the sky was "literally black" with Nazi planes.

Two Nazi raiders were shot down by the Polish pilot.

With the help of fellow officers, the Pole told how it happened:

"I was attacked," he said, "by three Heinkels who seemed to be working to a plan—one flying alone and the other two as a pair. If you attack a pair, the single one tries to get on your tail."

So, he explained, he tackled the single Heinkel and watched it go down smoking. The two others, he added, flew away. Then, in the last battle of the afternoon, he got a Messerschmitt fighter.

The squadron leader's story:

"We climbed to 16,000 feet and looking down saw a large formation of Junkers 87s approaching from the sun, with the Messerschmitt 109s stepped up behind to 20,000 feet. We approached unobserved out of the sun and went into the attack on the rear Junkers before the enemy fighters could interfere.

"I gave a five-seconds burst to one bomber and broke off to engage two Messerschmitts. There was a dogfight.

"The enemy fighters were half rolling and diving and zooming in

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

MEDITATION ON A BEACH

A year ago I lay on the sand of this ocean beach nearest the Capital, my ear glued against a weak, primitive portable battery radio, trying to hear the faint whispers that told of the war's incredible beginning that morning.

Harlan Miller

This morning the war bulletins come in loud and clear: the threats, the boasts, the claims, the defiance. My new radio is painfully efficient. It brings the war nearer, nearer, much too near.

* * * *

I switch it off and swim out through the surf, out a little way toward the freighters and tankers wallowing north toward Delaware Bay with big flags painted on their sides. Knee deep, waist deep, chin deep . . . Perhaps, like several U. S. Senators, beyond my depth.

* * * *

What is really happening across that restless, shrinking ocean? Is England dying? Is Hitler sailing nach England? When do the barges loaded with tanks sail through the fog toward some bombarded beach punctuated with parachutists? What's coming our way?

"—the skirmish on this side"

Behind me at the Capital the picture is clearer: the tirades, petty jealousies, acrimony; the political skirmishing, egotistic ambition, muddle-headedness. The politicians dancing their adagios on a volcano.

* * * *

At the moment we are as pathetic as the Austrians, as confused as the Czechs, as blind as the Poles, as inert as the Danes, as stunned as the Norwegians, as smug as the Dutch, as hypnotized as the Belgians, as hidebound as the French, as deluded and perplexed by propaganda and dissension as any of them.

* * * *

Some of the turmoil comes from the blind mouths of misguided men of courage and honesty. But much of it comes from men who, however high their place, are phoneys, second raters, upstarts, ignoramuses, demagogs, nitwits, dunderheads or worse.

* * * *

Wait, wait, wait, they say; don't try conscription till next year; don't train the National Guard; don't sell the old destroyers. Something may turn up; maybe we can stop the clock; maybe we can do it single-handed with pitchforks.

* * * *

Their voices sound impressive from the microphones. But those who know them appraise them correctly as hollow, self-serving demagogs, raised on high by the mishaps of politics, political accidents no more worthy of national attention than so many circus freaks, cunning for campaigns, but not wise for national security.

"—so-called flower of our youth"

"In my district," they say, "there are several thousand pro-Nazis. So I mustn't do this and I mustn't say that."

But when they wangle a microphone from a nervous radio chain which they can harass, what they broadcast sounds mighty impressive.

* * * *

Meanwhile, the noisier little fraction of the young Americans, the part which tries to monopolize the title of "flower of our youth," the spoiled darlings of the 1920's and "the world owes me something" crowd of the 1930's, the pinkish youths, moans a chorus.

"What!" they say, floating into Senators' offices. "Must WE do something to preserve freedom? How dreadful!"

* * * *

The demagoges and the self-styled "flower of our youth" are only a minority, but a noisy one. Maybe it would silence them if a few thousand mature men were to volunteer for duty on tanks and bombers, men in their late thirties who would make better soldiers than these lads in their tearful twenties . . . Myself, I hereby volunteer to serve as machine gunner in Col. Lindbergh's plane. The Colonel needs protection . . . Now I'm covered with sand and the battery radio is blurting out another bulletin.

Guard Expects Few to Resign

Those Who Have Dependents Already Out, Say Leaders

War Department officials said last night that the resignation amendment in the mobilization bill passed by the Senate yesterday would cause only a "negligible" dent in the ranks of the National Guard.

At Oswego, N. Y., where the Twenty-ninth Division is encamped, Col Walter W. Burns, commander of the 260th Coast Artillery Regiment of the District National Guard, told a Post reporter that his outfit would lose less than 5 per cent because soldiers with dependents already have been discharged.

"Weeding Out" Began Long Ago

Military men here explained that the various States have been weeding such guardsmen out of their militia outfits ever since last September, when the war broke out in Europe. The officers in charge, it was said, realized that men who were worried about hungry wives and children were not likely to make good soldiers if called to active service.

The result is that today the National Guard is composed largely of enlisted men who are single, or who at least don't have to worry about the economic welfare of dependents.

Maj. Gen. John F. Williams, chief of the National Guard Bureau, sent a letter last fall to the adjutant generals in the various States urging them to discharge privates, corporals and sergeants with dependents.

No Assurance of Relief

"There was no certainty of relief for their dependents," Gen. Williams explained recently, "and no assurance that legislation looking to such relief was contemplated.

"We had to take into consideration the fact that after men were inducted into Federal service it would be too late to think about how they could care for those dependent on them."

In the "old days," a large proportion of National Guardmen were men with dependent wives and children. So long as there was no danger of war, this was all right with those in charge of the Guard. But now they think the resignation clause approved yesterday is a good thing.

Child Refugee Bill Speeded

already taken by the State Department in respect to a few English children.

This bill, it was said, would underline House approval of temporary admission of youthful war refugees from all countries in Europe—not England alone. Only youngsters under 16 would be admitted.

Representative Lesinski (Democrat), of Michigan, member of the Immigration Committee, declared yesterday that the bill would apply especially to orphans and refugees in Portugal, Spain and France who have been driven out of one country and into another as war spread over the continent.

Asserting that this measure gives the State Department the authority it wants, he declared that only 104 English children have been admitted under visitors' visas up to now.

The measure would give the Attorney General power to shorten or extend the period of admission if "such action would be in accordance with the purposes" of the bill.

debt relief similar to that extended to soldiers in the World War. The benefits include a moratorium on installment payments and insurance premiums.

Under the bill, as finally approved, nearly 400,000 men could be ordered out for a year's intensive training. This number includes 227,000 Guardsmen, 116,000 Reserve officers, 38,000 reserve enlisted men, 3,700 retired officers and 12,000 retired enlisted men.

Army officials have testified that the first mobilization order after passage of the bill, would cover only four Guard divisions and various antiaircraft and harbor defense units, a total of about 55,000 men. Additional units would be ordered into the field as equipment became available for them.

The bill contains a clause subjecting employers who refuse to rehire militiamen after their return to civilian life to prosecution under the Wagner Act for an unfair labor practice.

A Narrow Escape

The narrow defeat of the Adams amendment came after Administration leaders had warned that the limitation on areas in which the reserve forces could serve would gravely endanger defense of the Western Hemisphere.

"It would be folly to adopt this amendment," Barkley declared, "and serve notice on the world that all our pious resolutions in behalf of democracy and solidarity in the Western Hemisphere are of no more effect than if adopted by a quilting bee."

In a reference to the Pittman-Bloom resolution, which declared that the United States would not acquiesce in transfer of areas in the Western Hemisphere from one non-American power to another, Barkley said, "That declaration can mean only one thing—that we would actively resist such a transfer."

Adams contended that the only effect of his amendment was to insure that Congress retain authority over the dispatch of guardsmen outside the United States, instead of leaving the decision to the President.

"I know Congress can be assembled in three or four days," Barkley answered, "but what if Canada or Mexico or Bermuda were suddenly invaded? We would want to act immediately."

Senator Austin (Republican), of Vermont, ranking minority member of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, asserted that the Adams amendment "would paralyze the sovereignty of the United States just because we're afraid to trust the President with this power."

Chairman Sheppard (Democrat), of Texas, of the Military Affairs Committee, warned that "a delay of one, two or three days might throw the advantage to the enemy."

Rejection of the Adams amendment was followed by a vote on the motion of Senator Clerk (Democrat), of Missouri, to recommit the Guard bill to the Military Committee with instructions that it write the Adams amendment into the bill and report the measure back to the Senate at once. The motion was beaten 45 to 31.

Not a Test on Draft Bill

The roll call on the Guard bill itself was not interpreted at the Capitol as a test of strength on the Burke-Wadsworth bill, since many opponents of conscription had announced they were voting for the Guard mobilization with the idea that it makes the draft measure unnecessary.

Those opposing the Guard bill were Senators Bulow (Democrat), of South Dakota; Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut; Donahey (Democrat), of Ohio; Gillette (Democrat), of Iowa; Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia; Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, and Nye (Republican), of North Dakota.

Barkley, in calling up the Burke-Wadsworth bill after passage of the Guard measure, told his colleagues they "must be prepared for Saturday sessions" until they dispose of the military training bill, tax legislation and the $5,000,000,000 defense appropriation passed by the House last week. There will be no session tomorrow, however.

Another move to bolster the Nation's armed manpower developed at the Capitol yesterday when Secretary of the Navy Knox asked Congress for authority to hold future naval and Marine Corps enlisted men in service indefinitely during war or "declared emergencies." The proposal was made in a letter to Speaker Bankhead.

The legislation urged by Knox would apply only to men who enlisted after enactment of the bill and would provide for their discharge within six months after the end of the war or emergency. Present law permits involuntary extension of enlistments only in time of war.

Bill to Regulate Investment Trusts Passed by Senate

The Senate yesterday passed a House-approved bill to regulate investment trusts under the Securities Commission.

The measure, which now goes back to the House for action on an amendment, was drafted by the SEC, in collaboration with members of the industry. The latter had urged its inactment.

The bill would require registration of investment companies with the commission and submission of specified data and reports.

Regulatory provisions would include prohibition against "self-dealing" between companies and between affiliated individuals, requirements for a proportion of independent directorships, a prohibition against basic changes in investment policy without consent of stockholders and restriction on dividend payments and stock issues.

Roosevelt to Visit 7 Defense Projects

Inspection Tour For This Week-End To Start Tonight

By the Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Seven key spots in the Nation's vital Eastern seaboard defense system will be visited over the week-end by President Roosevelt, the temporary White House announced tonight.

The Chief Executive will inspect navy yards and other defense centers in New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island and Connecticut.

He leaves Hyde Park late Friday on the first leg of the trip, which has been rumored for several days.

Mr. Roosevelt will arrive in Portsmouth, N. H., early Saturday to inspect the navy yard, which now is building five submarines.

He then will go by boat to Boston, where in the navy yard six vessels are under construction, after which he will drive to the Army arsenal nearby Watertown, Mass.

The largest Navy building project in New England is at the Quincy Yard, Quincy, Mass., where 12 ships are under construction, one the giant battleship Massachusetts, a 35,000-tonner.

Always an ardent fisherman, the President Saturday night will turn from work to pleasure and will go out from Boston for a leisurely cruise to Newport, R. I., trying his luck. The Newport arrival is set for Monday.

The Navy has a training station, war college and torpedo factory there. Afterward he will cross Narragansett Bay to inspect the site of a large new naval air station and then cruise to New London, Conn., for an inspection of the Navy's submarine base and of the plant of the Electric Boat Co. in Groton, Conn., which is building submarines.

The party will return to Washington by train on Tuesday.

This will be the President's second tour of America's defenses and more are expected to follow. Little over a week ago he spent a day inspecting defense facilities in the Norfolk, Va., area.

Accompanying Mr. Roosevelt will be Secretary of Navy Frank Knox, Commerce Secretary Harry Hopkins, Brig. Gen. E. M. Watson, secretary and military aide to the President; Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntyre, White House physician, and Capt. Daniel J. Callaghan, naval aide.

Chairman Walsh (Democrat), of Massachusetts, of the Senate Naval Committee, will join the party at Portsmouth; Senator Green (Democrat), Rhode Island; Gov. Raymond Baldwin of Connecticut, and Senators Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, and Danaher (Republican), of Connecticut), at New London, Conn.

Wallace 'Wants' Photo to Make Him Look 'Eminent'

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace was quoted today as saying to a news photographer as he posed for a picture, "See what you can do about making me look the 'eminent scholar and gentleman' that Wendell Willkie calls me."

The Republican Presidential candidate made the remark at Des Moines, Iowa, last Monday.

Harry Warnecke, New York Daily News cameraman, said that when he asked what the candidate intended to debate with Willkie in the forthcoming campaign, the Democratic Vice Presidential nominee replied:

"I really do not know. Don't you think Willkie really should indorse the Democratic ticket? He's with us on the foreign and farm policies. All he needs to do is to get in line on social security and the WPA."

The Gallup Poll:

Public Votes Against Double Feature Movie Programs; Youth Is in Favor

By Dr. George Gallup

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion

PRINCETON, N. J., Aug. 8.—The American public by a vote of 57-43 casts its lot against double-bill motion picture programs—a topic of heated debate in American homes for the last decade or more.

DR. GALLUP

This fact is revealed in a survey conducted by the Institute to determine just what the men, women and children in all of the 48 States of the country think about the much-discussed problem of double bills. The cross-section of the population used in the study was especially drawn up to include children down to the age of 6, since a substantial portion of motion picture audiences is composed of minors.

57 Per Cent Opposed

The question put to persons included in the survey was:

"Would you rather go to a motion picture theater showing a single feature or to one showing a double feature?"

The vote of all groups is:

For Double Features..... 43

The reasons most frequently given by those opposing double bills, in order of importance, are: (1) that either one or both of the features is likely to be a "poor" picture; (2) that sitting through a double feature is fatiguing and takes too much time; and (3) that seeing two full-length pictures is confusing because, as one woman put it, "You generally think about a picture when you get home, and a double feature gets you mixed up."

"Kill More Time"

Those who like double features give as their chief reasons: (1) that a double bill gives movie goers more for their money; (2) if one picture is inferior, the other is likely to be good and in any event adds variety; and (3) a double feature gives those who attend a chance to "kill more time."

The importance of "poor pictures" as a reason for opposing double bills is established by another question included in the study. People were asked whether they would change their attitude toward double feature programs if both pictures in a double bill were good. When this qualification is added, the vote for double features becomes a majority—66 per cent, to 34 per cent opposed.

One interesting fact brought to light by the survey is a sharp difference of opinion on double features between persons under 18 years of age and persons over 18.

Likewise there is a wide difference in attitude between persons in the higher-income group and those in the lower-income group.

Popular With Youth

In general, the double feature is popular among persons under 18 years and among persons in the lower-income level, as the following tables show:

	For Single Features	For Double Features
AGE GROUPS
Aged 6 to 12.....	23%	77%
Aged 12 to 17.....	42	58
Aged 18 to 24.....	60	40
Aged 24 and over....	68	32
INCOME GROUPS
Upper Income Group	75%	25%
Middle Income Group	63	37
Lower Income Group	47	53
On Relief.....	42	58

The importance of the younger age groups can be seen from the fact that more than 60 per cent of all theater tickets bought in the Nation each week, as established by this survey, are purchased by persons under 30 years of age.

Willkie Lashes At Machine Rule

Nominee Will Send Dewey to Carry Fight Into Midwest

By the Associated Press

Colorado Springs, Colo., Aug. 8.—An assertion that "machines now in control of the Democratic Party do not make for good government" came today from Wendell L. Willkie.

The Republican Presidential nominee voiced the comment in announcing he had asked Thomas E. Dewey, one of the men he defeated for the nomination, to make a series of speeches for him in the Midwest "on the relationship between political machines and good government."

"I have asked Dewey to emphasize this theme song—the American people should know about machine politics," Willkie said.

Willkie also told his press conference he has "come to the philosophy that 50 per cent of the money spent in political campaigns is wasted money." He did not elaborate.

The statement regarding campaign expenditures was made in response to questions about a statement by Samuel F. Pryor, Eastern campaign manager, which indicated that party finances might be decentralized this year.

Willkie declined specific comment on Pryor's statement, however. Reiterating that he would like to close all the loopholes in the Hatch Act, he said that law, if properly amended, would clean up American politics.

Herbert Hoover, Willkie disclosed, will come here either Saturday or Sunday for a talk about campaign issues and political strategy. The talk originally had been arranged for a point in Yellowstone Park. Later arrangements were made for the two men to meet in Denver.

Willkie said that Hoover "very graciously" has accepted his invitation to come here. The former President asserted at West Yellowstone that "the pressure" upon Willkie made it advisable for him to come to Colorado Springs.

The candidate said he believed that Dewey was the best qualified man in the Nation to portray the effect of machine politics on good government. The New York prosecutor, Willkie aides said, planned to hammer at Democratic organizations in "Chicago, Memphis, and Jersey City."

Dewey, Willkie said, could "make crystal clear the implications of machine control." The nominee added that "Tom will do a good job" of discussing the so-called "Two per cent clubs" in Indiana.

Farley to Quit Cabinet Aug. 31

lace's arrival, had told newsmen, however, that the talk between the President and Wallace "isn't going to be a campaign conference. The President will talk over with Wallace the date of his acceptance speech, which hasn't been decided, and they will discuss campaign issues." Hassett reminded reporters that Mr. Roosevelt had said twice he would not make a campaign.

The time of Wallace's formal acceptance of the Vice Presidential nomination tentatively has been set for about August 20. He has said he would keep away from active electioneering until then.

At the women's rally, the President described his corn argument with Wallace as one which was "interminable."

Wallace broke in to say he believed it was eight years ago, to the exact date, that he first met the President in the library of the Roosevelt home here.

"Right," declared Mr. Roosevelt, "and they have been pretty happy eight years for both of us."

Commerce Secretary Harry Hopkins arrived today, too, but Hassett said the Chief Executive would not see him and Wallace at the same time.

Farley has persistently been reported planning to head a syndicate to buy the New York Yankee baseball team, although other reports have linked him with the possible management of the Willys-Overland Motors, Inc.

It was "Big Jim" who was the guiding genius of the campaign which put Mr. Roosevelt in the White House in 1933. It was he who directed the highly successful 1936 campaign which brought the President four more years in office.

But in recent months, when it became increasingly apparent that Mr. Roosevelt would accept renomination, Farley was reported frequently to have differed with "the boss" on the third-term issue.

Then, at the Democratic Convention in Chicago last month, he announced his resignation as Democratic national chairman.

In an exchange of letters, released at the temporary White House, both Farley and the President expressed keen regret that the Postmaster General had found it necessary to return to private enterprise.

"All of us in the Administration will miss you deeply; we count on seeing you often," Mr. Roosevelt wrote. "I especially count on this after all of our years of close personal association. Our friendship will always continue."

Farley omitted such warm expressions from his letter of resignation, but closed it with "kindest personal regards."

"I know that it will please you," he told the President, "to learn that I have made definite arrangements for my future in private business where I know I shall be very happy."

Flood Isolates Texas Guardsmen

Camp Beauregard, La., Aug. 8 (U.P.).—The Thirty-sixth Division, National Guard, from Texas was isolated from general headquarters of the Third Army Area maneuvers tonight after floods washed out roads and bridges southwest of here.

The floods cut off highways, but did not block rail connections, between the Forty-fifth Division—composed of Guardsmen from Oklahoma, New Mexico, Colorado and Arizona—and headquarters.

"The Thirty-sixth has enough food for the present—through breakfast in the morning," Col. Earnest O. Thompson, of the 111th Quartermaster Corps, said, "but we don't know how much longer the food will last after that."

Broadcasters Map Music War Royalty Plan

By Martin Kane
United Press Staff Writer

New York, Aug. 8.—The musical discord between the big broadcasting chains and Ascap (American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers) sounded another note tonight when the broadcasters announced their own plan of royalty payments to compete with Ascap.

Ascap collected almost $5,000,000 from broadcasters last year and, for 1941, set up a plan which broadcasters estimated would cost them $8,000,000. They retorted by forming Broadcast Music, Inc., their own version of Ascap, and announced that, after January 1, no Ascap tunes will be played on the networks. This affects about 300 stations.

The B. M. I. royalty plan differs radically from that of Ascap in that it permits the broadcasters to pay only for music they use—a proposed rate of 1 cent per performance per station for each song.

The Ascap organization, controlling about 70 per cent of popular songs, has contended that most radio programs are built around music and have been charging a percentage of gross radio revenues.

This income Ascap divides among its members under a rating system based on the estimated popularity of the music.

B. M. I. accompanied its royalty announcement with the assertion that instances have been found where "writers who now receive from $10 to $1,200 per annum (from Ascap) would be receiving several thousands of dollars under B. M. I.'s method of payment." Topnotch writers get as much as $15,000 or more from Ascap annually.

In the middle in this controversy are the orchestra leaders, who have to have radio outlets to retain their popularity and also must play popular music. Some of them may even have to change their theme songs, by which their bands are known to millions, because these songs are controlled by Ascap.

Neville Miller, president of the National Association of Broadcasters, suggested recently that band leaders, between now and January, change their theme songs "to numbers which they will unquestionably be able to use next year."

B. M. I. has produced only a few songs so far but expects to be going full swing by the end of the year. If the two rivals hold their present lines, the public then will have an opportunity to test its liking for the new and lesser known composers against such Ascap standbys as Jerome Kern, Deems Taylor, George Gershwin, and Victor Herbert as well as the newer crop of swing composers which Ascap controls. B. M. I. says its music will be just as good.

Wheeler Blasts Big Firms That 'Pull Strings'

Big corporations which "pull strings" in Washington to achieve their ends were held guilty yesterday of "a disgraceful spectacle which ought to stop" by Senator Burton K. Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, chairman of the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee.

The Montanan's scathing denunciation of the practice of "fixing" through intervention of important politicians came at the adjournment of a committee hearing involving the names of two former Republican Senators, George H. Moses, of New Hampshire, and Daniel O. Hastings, of Delaware.

Called originally to consider the nomination of Thad H. Brown to succeed himself as a member of the Federal Communications Commission, the hearing resolved itself further yesterday into an investigation of practices of the Radio Corporation of America.

Denies $15,000 Payment

Highlights of yesterday's six-hour session in the committee hearing included:

Testimony by Edward O. Keller, of Washington, described by one witness as an R. C. A. "contact man," that a Federal court clerk in Wilmington, Del., received $15,000 for his alleged part in helping obtain a trial continuance in an antitrust case against the company.

Denial by H. C. Mehaffy, jr., the clerk in question, who followed Keller on the stand, that he had received any money from R. C. A.

Testimony by C. Edward Duffy, former law partner of former Senator Hastings—the latter is now practicing law in Washington—that the one-time Senator from Delaware received $2,500 from R. C. A. to pay Mehaffy, RCA 236 .....

Testimony of Whyland Shaffer, Washington real estate broker, that he was paid $1,000 for his services toward obtaining a continuance in the antitrust case, which was scheduled for trial in October, 1932.

A statement by Chairman Wheeler that both Moses and Hastings would be heard by the committee if they wished to testify, though he refrained from saying any direct effort would be made to summon them, whether by invitation or subpena.

Postponement Cited

Keller testified that he had learned from Moses that Mehaffy was summoned to New York by Hastings in connection with the desired continuance. A few days later, he continued, the court clerk sent out notices that a postponement had been granted. The notices went to R. C. A., General Electric and Westinghouse, all of which were involved in the court case.

U. S., Russia Move Toward Closer Accord

Conversations Here Believed Intended To Restrain Japan

By the Associated Press

The United States, disturbed by Japan's new "greater East Asia" policy, appeared last night to be seeking friendlier relations with Soviet Russia.

After two unusually long conferences with the Soviet Ambassador, Constantine Oumansky, within a week, Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles said today they had discussed many questions involving relations between the two countries.

The discussions, he said, had proceeded in a friendly and constructive spirit on both sides with a view to adjusting any differences as equitably as possible.

At the same time, Welles declined to comment in any way on Japanese press reports that the American Government had asked Japan to define more clearly its attitude regarding French Indo-China.

Turn in Relations Seen

The Maritime Commission's action Wednesday in authorizing two American-owned tankers to take cargoes of motor gasoline to Russia was linked in some quarters with the Government's apparent effort to smoothe out trade and other difficulties with Moscow.

The commission denied applications for two other vessels to take steel and oil to Japan.

Welles, when asked for comment on this, recalled that he told the press about ten days ago that he understood charters would be granted for American ships to go to ports where there was no danger involved. He added that Vladivostock was a port where no danger of hostilities existed at present, while belligerent activities did exist along the Chinese coast.

In other ways, a definite turn was indicated in United States and Soviet relations since Welles two weeks ago condemned the Russian acquisition of the three small Baltic countries—Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

Philippine Status in Doubt

For one thing, the annual trade treaty with the Soviet government was renewed this week, although with a reservation that Moscow could not guarantee to fulfill its estimated purchases if American export restrictions under the national defense program proved too severe.

Corresponding with the apparent efforts to eliminate friction with Soviet Russia was increasing concern over Japan's intentions under the new Konoye government.

Apart from the suspicion that Japan aimed at complete domination of French Indo-China, and possibly the Netherlands East Indies, was the question of whether the Philippine Islands came within the scope of Japan's "greater East Asia" program.

This was believed connected with Ambassador Joseph C. Grew's inquiries in Tokyo.

With Japan still veiling the specific objectives of its new policy, some diplomatic sources considered the American conversations with Russia as a move to restrain Hokyo.

MAJ. PETER PIERRE SMITH GEN. JULIUS HOWELL

When old age made their once strong legs decrepit and there could be no parades, Confederate veterans said they wanted to meet as long as two could shake hands.

It seems the end of that may come.

Gen. Julius Franklin Howell, the veterans' commander-in-chief, said in Richmond yesterday he would recommend no more reunions after that in Washington, October 8-11.

"There are few of us left. I'm afraid this has to be our last meeting."

One of Washington's two surviving veterans, 97-year-old Maj. Peter Pierre Smith, 4830 Sixteenth street northwest, concurred.

There is expected to be dissent, W. F. Van Swaringen, 818 Ninth street northwest, D. C. commander, Sons of Confederate Veterans, said he anticipated considerable sentiment for more reunions.

He expected John Shaw, aged 105, to attend the Washington meeting, and said there was a veteran, aged 124, in Florida, who more than likely would be here. In all, he expected about 150.

Col. Gordon Named New Commandant at Fort Myer

Exactly 38 years after he was assigned to Fort Myer, Va., as a second lieutenant, Col. William W. Gordon will return there on September 1 to assume command. His assignment, to succeed Col. George Patton, has been announced by the War Department.

COL. GORDON

Stationed in Boston, Mass., at present in the department of the inspector general there, Col. Gordon was until 1939 an instructor in the Army War College here. He is the son of Col. William B. Gordon who died in 1938.

Born at Fort Point, Calif., in 1879, he was appointed a second lieutenant of cavalry on July 26, 1902. During the World War he served overseas and participated in the Oise-Aisne operation, and the St. Mihiel and Meuse Argonne offensives.

Col. Gordon served at one time as an aide to Gen. John J. Pershing. Decorations held by him include the Silver Star citation and the Purple Heart with Oak-Leaf Cluster.

Howard Sanity Report Today In Matricide

Findings to Be Filed With Commission On Mental Health

A report on the sanity of Jerome Howard, 25, accused of the bizarre murder of his aged mother last March, will be filed in District Court today by the Commission on Mental Health, it was learned last night.

Howard appeared before the commission at Gallinger Hospital yesterday, but Chairman Thomas Gillespie Walsh declined to disclose the findings. He said, however, that in addition to his report to District Court, the case also would be presented to the grand jury.

The murder of Mrs. Bessie Catherine Howard, 66, was uncovered by The Post. A reporter discovered the tragedy while investigating complaints of strange goings on in the Howard home at 815 Taylor street northwest.

Mrs. Howard had been dead two weeks when her body was found in a second-floor bedroom on March 30. Jerome was guarding his mother's body. Her throat had been cut and there were several stab wounds in her face and body. Jerome allegedly admitted the slaying to police and has since been confined for mental observation.

Japanese Thrust Feared When Nazis Attack Britain

Tokyo Believed Speeding Plans For Assault

By the Associated Press

Shanghai, Aug. 8.—Japan, following her self-proclaimed destiny of dominance in "greater East Asia," was reported tonight to be hastening preparations for a lightning drive in the direction of French Indo-China and the Netherlands East Indies.

Trustworthy foreign sources, sponsors of this report, predicted Japan's big Southward push would be geared to Germany's blitzkrieg machinery, now tuning up for the threatened invasion of the British Isles, and would start within 48 hours after the Germans start.

The essence of such timing would be to take advantage of diversion of British attention to home defense. Britain stands as the only belligerent defender of the rich East Indies and Indo-China, territory of the German-vanquished Netherlands and France.

If Adolf Hitler fails to move it was believed the Japanese would proceed more slowly and more cautiously, but further efforts to extend Japanese influence were regarded as inevitable.

Occasional premature reports of imminent Japanese action in past weeks have been traced to movements of warships and transports between Formosa and Hainan, islands off the Southeastern and Southern China coasts.

Formosa, long Japanese-ruled, and Hainan, occupied in the three-year-old war against China, are likely springboards for thrusts against Indo-China and the welter of islands that make up the Dutch East Indies.

Along with the expansionist stirring of the Japanese empire, came other more or less related reports.

In Tokyo, 126 members of the Japanese Diet's 466 members adopted a resolution urging the government to take "all available and effective measures to drive British influence from East Asia."

Meanwhile Gen. Issaku Nishihara, head of a Japanese economic mission, was reported flying back to Hanoi, French Indo-China, after consultation with Premier Prince Fumimaro Konoye in Tokyo for continuation of economic negotiations.

"Breathing Spell'

The prospective return of the negotiator—in place of Japanese reliance on her military strength—was considered in Hanoi as signaling a "breathing spell" and a "triumph of diplomacy over force."

A stiffening of resistance to Japanese wishes appeared in announcement of a decision to reopen transit routes through Indo-China for Chinese exports. A month ago Indo-China agreed to seal her border with China and it was stipulated that outgoing Chinese shipments would be halted for one month.

The principal Japanese demand was that Indo-China routes should be closed to Chinese imports of war supplies, but Japan also wanted to shut off the exports which China must make to buy war supplies.

One explanation of this slight display of French resistance to Japan was that the Vichy government, with Berlin's approval, favored putting a brake on the Japanese.

One informant raised the possibility that Hitler desired to preserve all the bargaining advantages he now holds, in favor of an ultimate, broader settlement with Japan, perhaps embracing Batavia, in the Dutch East Indies.

Paper Hints Rift

Copyright by New York Times

Tokyo, Aug. 8.—The first hint of a rift in Japanese-German harmony appears in tonight's newspaper Hochi in the form of a request that Germany should offer the Dutch East Indies and Indo-China to Japan, coupled with a hint that if the offer is not made Japan's sentiment may turn toward America and Britain. Hochi's advice to Germany appears in an open letter signed by Teiichi Muto, its principal political commentator.

He based his appeal on the ground that Japan's policy regarding the Dutch East Indies and Indo-China involves a risk of war with the United States and that Germany's support should be guaranteed if Japan is to accept that risk. Muto informs Germany that even if Japan establishes a new order in the Dutch East Indies and Indo-China she will allow Germany to use their resources. "Japan," he says "never aspires to a monopoly; the word 'greed' is not in the Japanese dictionary."

He admits that it was a German victory that liberated those colonies from control of Holland and France but points out that Germany did not and could not detach them by direct force.

Japan regards Germany as an ally, says Muto, because Germany supports Japan's plans in the Far East, but unless Japan receives Germany's guarantees she cannot go ahead with vigorous anti-American and anti-British measures.

Organizations Would Sponsor War Children

Plan Approved By Committee Here, Referred to New York

Methods of sponsoring war refugees by groups of persons and associations, were discussed yesterday at a general meeting of the Washington Committee for the Care of European Children.

Brought up at the local meeting, the suggestion received favorable attention and was referred to the committee's national headquarters in New York for approval.

Meanwhile guarantees were made yesterday that the refugee children would come to this country in excellent physical and mental condition when Mrs. John Jay O'Connor, chairman of the local group, told of plans to have the children examined by a board of leading physicians.

Would Be Examined And Treated

Mrs. O'Connor said the plans were being worked out by Miss Katherine Lenroot, director of the children's bureau, Department of Labor.

Physicians would examine the children on their arrival and recommend any treatment necessary before they are sent to their new homes.

Yesterday's meeting also adopted a resolution praising the work of ten volunteer workers headed by Mrs. John J. O'Connor, who has served with the committee since its organization. Other volunteers complimented were Mrs. Stuart Rice, Mrs. Thomas Kirby, Mrs. Bernice Kaplan, Miss Jean Matscheck, Mrs. Oscar Powell, Mrs. Violet Goldberg, Mrs. Elizabeth Webb, Mrs. Gardner Rogers and Mrs. A. Ford Hinrich.

Central Registration Planned

Central registration of all refugee children in this country will be undertaken soon, the committee announced.

Invitations will go shortly to all sponsors of children already in the country to cooperate in order that the committee may solve new problems affecting the children, such as changes in family composition.

The file will be maintained at the committee's main offices, 215 Fourth avenue, New York City.

Ship Beached In N.Y. Harbor By Fire, Blasts

Investigation Report Dismisses Early Suspicion of Sabotage

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 8.—Rocked by two sharp explosions after a fire that flared from stem to stern, the Liverpool-bound Norwegian freighter, Lista, was beached in the lower harbor today.

Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and the police sabotage squad investigated the crew and cargo of the American-operated ship, which had been trading between New York and England.

A preliminary report by city detectives dismissed likelihood of sabotage and said the fire started in a piece of waste in the ship's engine room and spread rapidly.

The explosions came, the report said, when the flames reached a fuel tank and a kerosene tank near the engine room.

Marine authorities said the 3,671-ton Lista was delayed three days in sailing due to difficulties in signing on a crew, a not unusual occurrence on ships bound for war zones.

The Cosmopolitan Shipping Co., operators of the vessel, said she carried a general cargo for Liverpool. They denied reports that munitions were aboard.

One explosion appeared to come from the galley. Neither was explained.

The Lista left New York last night and a few hours later, at 2:30 a. m. (E.S.T.), radioed she had engine trouble and was unable to proceed.

Three tugs, one acting as a rudder, were bringing the ship in when fire spurted from her idle engine room.

Berlin Claims Loss of 34 British Planes

Day's Raids Also Said to Have Netted 72,000 Shipping Tons

By C. Brooks Peters

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Aug. 8.—German naval and air units let loose against their British enemy today and when the smoke cleared away 72,000 tons of enemy shipping had been sunk and 34 British pursuit planes had been shot down.

This was the claim of a special communique of the German high command release here this evening. The most destructive of these Anglo-German engagements took place, according to the German report, in the English Channel this morning.

There units of the Reich's air force attacked an enemy convoy. German bombers report they sank 12 ships of the convoy, with a total tonnage of 55,000, as well as damaging five others.

Defenders Lose Five Planes

British pursuit planes, meanwhile, came out to drive off the enemy and defend the convoy. But according to the German version of the battle five of the British planes were shot down while one of the German planes is "missing."

Other air battles on a larger scale than in preceding days also occurred between the rival air forces, although where they occurred was not stated. In the course of these the Germans report their flying warriors brought down 29 enemy pursuit planes, with the loss of only two of their own planes.

The special communique reports furthermore that on the night of August 7 to 8 the Reich's naval speedboats attacked an enemy convoy which was heavily guarded. Although destroyers accompanying the convoy, as well as the heavily armed merchantmen themselves, offered stiff resistance, the Germans report that their boats succeeded in sinking a tanker of 8,000 tons, a steamer of 5,000 tons and another of 4,000 tons. A small tanker, the Germans allege, was shot into flames while, they add, all their speedboats returned to their home ports unscathed.

War's Biggest Air Battle Still Raging

back through the darkness in apparent determination to give Britain's defenders no rest.

The roar of enemy planes was heard over Wales, along the Southeast coast, over towns in the southwest, the Midlands and the northeast.

Searchlight batteries pierced the blackness. A half dozen bombs were dropped on the outskirts of one Midland town, and in other sections flashes and the crash of antiaircraft fire could be heard.

There were indications, too, that this new visitation was being repaid on a big scale by the Royal Air Force. Late tonight radio stations in ten German and German-controlled cities, including Berlin and Hamburg, fell silent—a normal indication of the presence of hostile airmen. It was the largest number of German stations to cease transmission without explanation since the war began.

The other silenced stations were Stuttgart, Brussels, Cologne, Hilversum, Leipzig, Strasbourg, Frankfort and Saarbrucken.

In the last three of the day's main attacks—attacks concentrated on shipping in the Channel—the Germans loosed 150 dive bombers and fighters at one convoy.

Of the tentative total of raiders officially claimed shot down, 19 were dive bombers and 34 fighters.

Each wave of bombers was screened by fighter planes—many of them the new Heinkels, Germany's counterweapon to the British Spitfires and Hurricanes.

It was the heaviest one-day loss ever claimed against the Nazis in the war for Britain's skies. The previous high was on July 12, when the British announced the destruction of 26 German raiders.

Residents along the south coast who watched the great battle over the Channel said bombs dropped almost continuously from daybreak on.

"The fighters," said one, "kept the Germans so busy, though, that all the bombs I saw fell into the sea. We saw planes dropping, too. I myself saw one crash into the sea in flames. Two others came down farther along the coast.

Third Raid Interrupts Tea

"There was a burst of raiding in the morning and then again in the early afternoon. Then there was a lull.

"But just when we were getting ready for tea a third raid started on a convoy in the Channel.

"We saw a British fighter and a German plane circle around each other at a great height, and soon the Nazi began to turn and spin down. It crashed in flames into the sea.

"We saw a dive bomber suddenly appear overhead with its starboard wing damaged. A British fighter roared down and forced the German to land in a field. The crew was captured."

The raids followed a series of darting attacks by Nazi torpedo boats upon Channel shipping.

In these stealthy assaults the British acknowledged the loss of three coastal vessels and damage to several others—an overture to the subsequent bombing attacks on British convoys in which several ships were damaged—but reported they had sunk one speedboat and damaged another.

Fires Started at Kiel

In a prelude to it all, British fliers last night bombed the German naval base at Kiel, dropping their explosives through the mists and setting off a series of fires and explosions. They also attacked the Nazi-held French port of Cherbourg.

But today was such a day of aerial warfare as never had been known before.

There was no specific official information as to the loss of life aboard the savagely punished convoy in the Channel, but the use of the term "survivors" suggested casualties.

Somaliland Attack A Feint, British Say

By Larry Allen

Associated Press Staff Writer

Cairo, Aug. 8.—British spokesmen expressed the conviction tonight that the Italian drive through British Somaliland toward the Gulf of Aden and the Indian Ocean was merely a feint to hide preparations for a grand assault on Egypt.

Admitting Fascist gains in Somaliland, Britons nevertheless said the Italians main effort would be to break Britain's stranglehold on Mediterranean sea routes by which water and other necessities must be carried to Italian Africa.

Also, as long as Britain holds Egypt and the Suez Canal, Italy has neither effective sea nor land connections with her Ethiopian empire.

The real big push, they said, would come in mid-August.

The Italians were reported facing a dwindling water supply in blockaded Libya, a land largely of burning deserts where water is as vital as bullets.

Virtually all the water used by Italy's sand-whipped troops in eastern Libya has been transported from Italy, it was asserted, in specially constructed water tankers, dodging the British blockade.

A deep thrust into Egypt would solve one of Italian Marshal Graziani's problems by opening the way for new supplies of water and oil.

Egypt's position in the anticipated action remained a debated question.

An authoritative British source said an Egyptian declaration of war on Italy "is a matter solely for the Egyptians themselves." He pointed out that "at the moment, Egypt is a nonbelligerent ally."

Another observer said Egypt is determined to keep the Suez Canal out of Italian hands, but that she might not necessary enter the war if she thought the canal safe and the Italians left the Egyptians "well alone."

While the Italians pushed, with only little opposition, from Ethiopia into British Somaliland, Royal Air Force planes kept up their daily bombing of Italian troop concentrations and communications in North Africa.

Mexico Probes Reported Plot To Kill Leaders

Mexico City, Aug. 8 (AP).—The attorney general's office delved today into charges by members of the permanent commission of the Mexican congress that rival political leaders were plotting the assassination of President Lazaro Cardenas and Gen. Manuel Avila Camacho, who is claimed by the government party to be the president-elect.

Principal leaders of the campaign of Gen. Juan Andreau Almazan, Camacho's foremost opponent in last month's election, were called to the attorney general's office for consultation.

Almazan leaders say their candidate won the election. The Cardenas government party contends Camacho won. The Mexican Senate must count the ballots and certify the winner.

climbing turns. They were painted silver.

"I fired two five-second bursts at one and saw it dive into the sea. Then I followed another up in a zoom and caught him as he stalled."

A flight lieutenant of the same squadron reported he had brought down two Junkers, although the engines of his own plane had stopped, before he managed to land.

"I was forced to retire owing to engine failure," he said, "but dived on a Junkers. After a three or four second burst it went into an inverted dive and crashed.

"My engine started again, so I went after another Junkers and attacked him before he was able to make his attack on the convoy. He dived into the sea at high speed. After that, my engine stopped for good and I barely got back to England."

One Spitfire squadron carried the battle over to the French coast. Its men reported chasing seven Messerschmitts over the Channel and destroying six of them. Then as a last salute one pilot fired at a German motor torpedo boat off Calais.

"Several of the crew," he remarked, "fell overboard."

British Offer India Freedom for Aid

England Stresses 'Partnership' Basis In Bid for Support

By the Associated Press

London, Aug. 8.—Britain appealed to India today to give her vast latent strength in the empire's fight for life against Axis forces striking both in West and East, and held out to the 350,000,000 subject peoples of that fabulously wealthy possession the prospect of independence after the war.

In a statement announced simultaneously in the House of Commons by L. S. Amery, British Secretary of State for India, and in India by the Viceroy, the Marquess of Linlithgow, the government proposed a "free and equal partnership" for India in the British commonwealth of nations for the future.

It was said the government trusts "that for the period of the war . . . all parties, communities and interests (in India) will combine and cooperate in making a notable Indian contribution to the world cause which is at stake."

Details Lacking

The "partnership" thus offered was not outlined in detail, but it was interpreted authoritatively as going beyond even Dominion status.

All this came while the British Isles were awaiting the long-threatened German invasion from across the English Channel and while the African troops of Italy were marching in British Somaliland, threatening Egypt and driving for the Indian Ocean along Britain's lifeline of empire.

Nothing was said officially as to the extent of air which India could give in this critical hour in British history, but that aid could be tremendous—Indian gold and supplies and unlimited numbers of Indian troops.

The new policy toward India whose people make up over one-half of all the half-billion subjects of King George probably will be debated in the House of Commons next Wednesday, said Clement Attlee, a government parliamentary spokesman.

As the announcement was made William Gallacher, Communist member, demanded:

"Is Mr. Amery not aware that the closing of the Burma road has had a disastrous effect on feeling in India?"—a reference to the fact that the Churchill government recently agreed, in a gesture toward Japan, to halt munitions shipments to China over that route for three months.

Amery made no answer, for the speaker held that Gallacher had interjected "a matter of opinion—not a question."

The new gesture for Indian solidarity in behalf of the empire was heard with caution and reserve by Nationalist leaders in India, but drew favorable comment from the Independent and Liberal Party heads.

Comment Withheld

Maulana Abdul Kalan Azad, president of the Congress Party, said in Bombay that he had been invited to an interview by the Viceroy and that, in the meantime, he would have no comment. Other leaders of the independence movement also remained silent.

Some Nationalist newspapers, however declared that, since immediate independence had not been promised, the Congress Party was not likely to consent to participate in the war.

The British Government's statement promised and proposed appointment of "representative Indians" to the Viceroy's executive council; establishment of a war advisory council on which Indians would be represented; and that "full weight" would be given the views of minorities in any Constitutional revision.

Then it added:

"It goes without saying that they (the British Government) could not contemplate the transfer of their present responsibilities for the peace and welfare of India to any system of government whose authority is directly denied by large and powerful elements in India's national life. Nor could they be parties to the coercion of such elements into submission to such a government.

"The second point of general interest is the machinery for building within the British Commonwealth of Nations the new constitution scheme when the time comes. There has been very strong insistence that the scheme should be primarily the responsibility of Indians themselves and should originate from Indian conceptions. . . .

"His Majesty's government are in sympathy with that desire and wish to see it given the fullest practical expression, subject to the due fulfilment of the obligations which Great Britain's long connection with India has imposed on her. . . .

"It is clear that a moment when the commonwealth is engaged in a struggle for existence is not one in which fundamental constitutional issues can be decisively resolved.

"But His Majesty's government . . . will most readily assent to the setting up after the conclusion of the war, with the least possible delay, of a body representative of the principal elements in Indian national life in order to devise the framework of the new constitution, and they will lend every aid in their power to hasten decisions on all relevant matters to the utmost degree."

rectly to the Bahamas where the duke will be governor and commander in chief of British armed forces.

Thousands lined the shore as the Excalibur pulled in and cheers rose from a throng of about 1,000 which crowded the Royal Yacht Club lawn, near the jetty where the Windsors stepped ashore from a tender.

The duke, tanned and boyish in gray serge, came ashore first.

Maj. Gen. Bernard, Admiral Kennedy-Purvis, their ladies and other officialdom met him.

The duke snapped to attention while an honor guard gave the royal salute at present arms and the band played "God Save the King." The duke followed this with an inspection of the guard drawn up on the lawn while the duchess chatted with Mrs. Brooke and Lady Kennedy-Purvis.

The duchess wore a printed satin-backed crepe of pink and blue of all-over design with a full-length coat of royal blue crepe, its elbow-length sleeves hanging straight from her shoulders. Her hat was a calot of opalescent pearls with a chou in front. She had elbow-length white gloves and white shoes.

The women of Bermuda stole polite glances at this costume.

The duke wore a tab-collared shirt with his gray suit, an Oxford University tie and tan and white sports shoes. He carried an ordinary straw hat with black band.

Twice the duke passed along the ranks of soldiers, sailors and marines which made up the honor guard, stopping occasionally to chat with one of the men.

The entire ceremonies at the Royal Yacht Club took little more than five minutes, after which the duke entered the state landau, accompanied by the governor and governor's aide de camp.

They were followed by a carriage in which the duchess rode with Mrs. Brooke and Capt. Wood, the duke's equerry, who came over from Lisbon with the Windsors. The party drove directly to Government House where they will remain until going to Nassau.

British censors removed 120 of 700 bags of mail today from the Excalibur, even though it had gone out of its way to land the Duke and Duchess of Windsors here.

U. S. Studies Plan to Seize 'Frozen Funds'

Totals 2½ Billions

Never before, however, had he disclosed that the frozen treasure, estimated at $3,500,000,000, might be applied to the war debts, obligations which often strained relations between the United States and Great Britain and France during the past two decades.

The Treasury Secretary made it plain that he intended to "sit on" the impounded funds until their disposition is decided.

The sequestered investments, gold and deposits belong to the governgium, the Netherlands, Norway, gium, The Netherlands, Norway, Denmark, Luxembourg, Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania.

"Until we know what is going to happen," Secretary Morgenthau said, "certainly it is in the interest of the American people that I sit on this money and do nothing."

Morgenthau to "Sit"

Defending his plan to wait and see, the Cabinet member declared:

"No American citizen is losing by it. They are gaining by it, but until we can see more daylight, until the State Department can advise us more clearly on the status of these countries, I am sitting."

Official figures, meanwhile, revealed that the frozen funds would not go all the way toward reimbursing Americans for possible loss of the war debts and investments in the countries now under German domination.

The only countries so far invaded by Germany that are war debtors are France, owing $4,220,000,000; Belgium, $481,781,000, and Poland, $270,484,000. The total of this money owed the United States is $4,951,000,000.

Investments Big Total

To this can be added a total of American investments in the invaded nations, including business enterprises, bond holdings and short-term funds, of $476,000,000. The bulk of this is in Denmark ($103,000,000) and France $169,000,000).

If these sums were completely lost to the invaders, the total out-of-pocket cost for Americans, war debts plus investments, would be $3,427,000,000.

Against this loss there would be only the estimated $3,500,000,000 of frozen funds as a means of reimbursement. That figure, officials say, is an estimate and may be somewhat too high.

At the same time, Secretary Morgenthau admitted that American funds can go freely to Germany, while the Treasury has forbidden dollars to go to the countries invaded by Germany.

Admits It's "Silly"

"It's silly, but there's nothing I can do about it," the Treasury chief said, explaining that the freezing power had been used only where there was a possibility of "duress" being used against citizens to withdraw their funds from the United States.

Persons of German extraction and others with families and friends in the Third Reich sent remittances of $10,000,000 to Germany last year.

Seizure of frozen funds is not a method that can be used at present to collect war debts from Great Britain, Italy or Russia.

The British war debt to this country is $5,651,000,000, the Italians owe $2,026,000,000 and Russia still owes us $399,000,000.

Four District Guardsmen Get Awards

Medals Given as Coast Artillery Unit Intensifies Training

By Marshall Andrews
By a Staff Correspondent

Fort Ontario, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Well shaken down in its camp beside Lake Ontario, the District's 260th Coast Artillery got down to business today and the thunder of guns and the chatter of machine guns sounded throughout the day.

Even the band was busy, playing its first concert outside camp since the regiment left Washington. While searchlights of the 260th fingered the sky in routine training, the band played for a lawn fete at St. John's Catholic Church in Oswego. Failure of its heavy instruments to arrive on time, through lack of adequate transportation, disrupted plans to play at Cornell University while the regiment bivouacked at Watkins Glen Monday night.

Before the 260th returns to Washington from this maneuver, if induction into Federal service doesn't prevent its return, it will be reorganized, gaining four field officers. Each of its two battalion commanders will be lieutenant colonels and two majors will be created from its captains to serve as battalion executive officers. With Lieut. Col. Leroy S. Mann, regimental executive officer, it will then have three lieutenant colonels and five majors, including the chaplain.

Awards Presented

When the guns were covered this afternoon and the men back in camp, the regiment saw its first ceremony since leaving Washington. The first battalion was drawn up to see four of its noncommissioned officers in Battery B receive awards at the hands of Commander Elmer Vennerdrow of Agriculture Post No. 36, American Legion, in Washington.

The Legion medal for efficiency during the past year went to Sergt. Godfrey Doyle, picked by his officers as meeting the post's stiff requirements for its medal. Others to get awards were Sergts. Albert W. Armstrong and Aubrey A. Gunnels, who got the Army's expert pistol shot medal, and Sergt. Lorenz D. Smith, given the pistol sharpshooter's medal.

Battery B was adopted by Agriculture Post a year ago and has been more or less under the post's sponsorship. The legionnaires have even organized a gun crew to train on one of its 3-inch rifles.

Coming up from Washington with Vennerdrow for the ceremony, were Louis Roistacher, post adjutant, and Arthur A. Reimer, post historian. They returned to Washington immediately after presenting the medals.

When the regiment marched out to fire this morning, it found several gun crews of the 212th from New York working at their guns. After some delay until the matter was straightened out, the first battalion opened fire with 11 guns.

Fire Six Rounds Each

These guns fired six rounds each, using the smoke from the first burst, nearly 3 miles above the earth, as a target for those that came thundering after it. The guns banged with an earth-shaking crash and you heard the shells boring into the skies, rushing away like express trains until the sound almost ceased. Then a little white cotton ball blossomed against the blue sky and a half-minute later the sound of the exploding shell came back to earth.

Within a very few minutes, the guns thundered 66 times. The gunners were very proud of their compact bursts.

Three miles away the machine gunners of Battery H fired at towed sleeve targets with .30-caliber guns, while the .50-caliber gunners tracked the targets, unable to fire because they had no segments of articulated metal belt to hold their cartridges together. The .50-caliber battery has never fired its powerful weapons, which it received only recently. It has managed to borrow enough ammunition to begin firing, but still is waiting for belt clips and trying to borrow those. The .30-caliber gunners, firing so strenuously today, will be metamorphosed into .37-millimeter gunners as soon as they get the .37-millimeter guns.

Italians Bomb Gibraltar 3 Times Before Fleeing

Madrid, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Enormous damage has been caused to the British fortress of Gibraltar as result of repeated bombing attacks by Italian planes, one of which bombed "the rock" three times late today before it was driven off by anti-aircraft batteries, Spanish press reports said.

The plane first dropped bombs, most of which fell into the sea, around Punta Europa, and returned twice within a few minutes, but was driven off before any appreciable damage could be inflicted, the Cifra news agency reported from Algeciras.

Italian bombers were said to have destroyed several important military objectives at Gibraltar, including the Rock Hotel, Loreto College and the heights of the lofty rock.

The bombings of the heights were said to have caused great landslides which "produced identical effects to those of a large explosion."

Rumania Hedges On Yielding Land

Hungary Warned To Expect Only Small Section Of Transylvania

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bucharest, Aug. 8.—Premier Ian Gigurtu told his countrymen tonight that Rumania must give up some territory to Bulgaria and Hungary on Adolf Hitler's orders, but warned that his government would refuse Hungary's full demand for most of Transylvania.

Breaking the news to the Rumanians that their kingdom, already stripped of Bessarabia and Northern Bucovina by Soviet Russia, must suffer further amputations, the premier insisted nevertheless that Hungary at most would get only a small strip of Transylvania.

This he described as just big enough to make it possible for all Hungarians to leave Rumania and all Rumanians to return home.

He intimated negotiations with Hungary would be long and bitter and advised both Hungary and Bulgaria—the latter pressing for the return of Southern Dobruja—to be moderate in demands as the best means of preventing trouble.

Pro-Axis Policy Necessary

In her own interest, he said, Rumania had found it necessary to follow a pro-Axis policy—a policy that "imposes painful sacrifices."

As to Hungary, he declared, the dispute "could be easily regulated" by the latter's acceptance of population transfers and of economic collaboration. But, he went on, if Hungary insists on territorial cession from Rumania, she must be prepared to agree to a complete transfer of minorities.

The premier explained, by referring to his recent meeting with Hitler at Salzburg, why Rumania would be compelled to give up something to Hungary. Hitler, Gigurtu said, had ordered Rumania to come to terms with both Hungary and Bulgaria, although leaving the details to the three countries directly involved.

Conferees Missing

The premier expressed confidence that Bulgaria's claim on Southern Dobruja would be settled "before long."

While he spoke, Bulgarian and Rumanian negotiators had been scheduled to assemble at Craiova, Rumania, but dispatches from there reported tonight that while all was ready for the conference—and had been since this morning—the conferees themselves had not appeared.

There were accompanying reports that the meeting might be held, after all, not in Craiova, but in some remote country town. Officials said, however, that they expected the delegates within 48 hours.

INA RAY HUTTON, most beautiful band leader in the business, as well as one of the swingiest, will toss her baton tomorrow night on the "moonlight cruise" of the S. S. Potomac. This is Ina's first 1940 Washington appearance . . . The high standards of the Potomac Line's big name band specials will be maintained on the following Saturday, August 17, by Harry James and his orchestra, last seen at the Capitol Theater a few weeks ago.

A trio of three novachords is booked to open in one of Washington's most popular spots in ten days. The unit internationally known, has played all over Europe and this country and is the first of its type to come to Washington. More information later when the news is given official okay.

"GOD BLESS AMERICA." The Rainbow Room management is irked by an item used in another paper voicing criticism of "God Bless America" being played in dance time (a procedure expressly forbidden by Irving Berlin's publishers) and think the comment was aimed directly at them . . . They want the public to know that "God Bless America" is played in Rainbow only in its original, without an iota of change, that it is impossible to prevent some people from dancing to its joyous melody, that a number of highly placed labor leaders have expressed their enjoyment of the Rainbow rendition of this greatest Berlin success of many years.

ANOTHER AMBASSADOR ANNIVERSARY. It's been "Anniversary Week" for Manager Russell A. Conn of the Ambassador Hotel. First came the surprise party in honor of his seventh year as the hotel's head. A couple of days later he and Mrs. Conn celebrated their sixth wedding anniversary at a dinner party. P.S.—And Oscar of the Ambassador's Hi Hat tells us that he was 32 again last Wednesday. Happy birthday, Oscar! Hope you're 30 this time next year.

TODAY'S BIG EVENT is the opening of the new Three Star Trio in the Neptune Room. "Curly" Fox, who raises so much heck in the Capitol Theater orchestra, will be there with both drums and xylophone, blend rhythm with Evalyn Tyner's glittering pianistics and the electric organing of Jimmy Smiley. "Curly" has a great new specialty. He's going to imitate "Curly" Fox imitating Gene Krupa imitating "Curly" Fox . . . Milt Herth and his Trio left Neptune last night on a tidal wave of good wishes, regrets and general fanfare.

Gloria Daye has worn the same orchid for three weeks running in her dances on the Shoreham Terrace, popping it in and out of the ice box each time she appears. This lovely and durable posy was given her by Juan J. Tomadelli, the Shoreham's own orchid grower.

RUTH McCULLOUGH, Mayfair's blonde bombshell of swing

AUTHORING EXHAUSTS PETE MACIAS. "I'm one of you now," said Pete Macias, sitting down beside us in Lounge Riviera and yanking two typewritten pages out of his pocket. It was the copy on a substitute column he'd done for a vacationing society scribe. "It took me five hours to write that thing," said Macias, "and I wouldn't do it again for all the sugar in Cuba." . . . It goes against our grain to boost a competitor, but Pete's column was a driller!

PERSONAL TO ADELE VAN. Some of your Glen Echo fans have sent in a round robin letter saying, "We enjoy Adele Van's songs so much and wonder why she is so stingy with them. We would like to hear her sing a couple of times during every dance group."

Tom Ball, producer of this week's revue at the Lotus, has nine other revues rolling around the country. Before the war he also had a couple of groups touring Europe and South America. He's young and looks more like a big league baseball player than a showman.

MARYLAND GARDENS will present a glossy new revue this evening. Sidney Boyd of vaudeville is the new singing emcee. There'll be a flock of piquant girls and specialty acts, including dancer Dorothy and vocalist Yvonne Logan. . . . A "Water Carnival" is being planned for Maryland Gardens, will probably take place about the last of next week. A group of Billy Rose's Aquacade girls will be starred.

PRAISE FROM CAESARETTE. The town's prettiest press agent (hundreds of people will know whom we mean) just back from vacation, made her first visit to the new Bavarian, was completely delighted. "So good looking, so jolly, such nice people!" she purred.

Frankie Meyers is doing a handsome chore of accordioning in the Anchor Room. He'll be on hand until September 2 when ati Windsor is due to return from the Adirondacks.

"FEETS TOO BIG" is the newest jive novelty being introduced by Jack Schaeffer at the Casino Royal. The Four Queens are using cocktail shakers as maracas and Jack Morgan does a hop-skip-jump tap dance on a series of trays. Felix Zimmer accordions Viennese waltzes. Dora Day does a vigorous and graceful swing ballet. Other smart acts, too. It's a show of fine diversion value.

STARLIGHT CRACKS RECORDS. Between hot nights and Arthur Herbert's glistening dance music, the Starlight Roof has been drawing big crowds seven nights a week. Dinner dancing begins early in the evening and most of the diners stay right along until curfew rings.

FOR THE FOOD-MINDED. The Madrillon's "bouquet of seafood" is handsome as an orchid and much more satisfying. It's one of Chef Maggia's prides . . . The sea food you get at O'Donnell's Farms is of the same piu-perfect variety served at O'Donnell's in town . . . The luncheon specials at the Harrington Tavern always include refreshing hot-weather dishes . . . If you go dancing at the Nightingale, you'll also find an excellent selection of tasty sandwiches and salads for the supper hour . . . The Rustic Cabin's delicious chicken dinners offer the perfect way of starting the evening.

for the defense program. They cover about 4,200-odd airplanes.

"Money in the defense appropriation bill now before Congress will add 14,000 more planes to the total. We cannot make complete plans and arrange final details with the manufacturers until we know that the appropriations are passed. We won't know that definitely until the Congress passes the bill.

"However, we have received from the principal aircraft manufacturers complete estimates on the plant space necessary for the whole program. I would like to add that of money made available to us on July 1, five weeks ago, contracts have already been awarded for 45 per cent of the entire Army funds and 75 per cent of the Navy's funds."

This broadcast, in which Knudsen and other members of the commission gave a detailed accounting of the defense program, closely followed publication of a commission report showing that its production division had cleared $1,792,000,000 of Army and Navy contracts in the past two months. The dates on which the products involved in the contracts will be delivered were not announced.

In response to a radio commentator's question about plane production, Knudsen said:

"Present production is approximately 900 planes per month. By January 1 the number will have risen to 1,500 planes and the volume will increase steadily thereafter."

Other commission officials said that the figures included the planes being made in this country for Britain.

Knudsen was asked whether sufficient equipment would be available for an Army of 400,000 men this fall, in the event the compulsory service law were passed, or other measures were enacted to create such a force.

"If you mean uniforms, other clothing and general equipment, the answer is yes," he said.

Asked when deliveries could be expected on the combat material in which the commission was interested, he replied:

"I expect that the tooling-up process will more or less take up the balance of this fall, but by January substantial deliveries of most of the material should commence and by spring, 1941, production should be going at a good rate."

Points made by other members of the commission included:

Sidney Hillman, Labor member—About 80,000 persons are taking training for jobs in defense industries. Would-be trainees should apply to their nearest State Employment Office.

The shipbuilding industry is now employing almost 40,000 more persons than at the ten-year peak in 1937; the aircraft industry is employing 50,000 more; the machine tool industry is employing 18,000 more, and the same is true of the engine industry.

Chester Davis, in charge of the agricultural division:

"No defense program can succeed if farm income and prices are not maintained at a level which will keep the farm plant healthy in the defense front. Existing machinery developed during the last seven years is available to do this job."

Leon Henderson, in charge of the division of price stabilization:

"The President wants to avoid the familiar price spiral—like he saw in the last war—where wages, the cost of living and prices skyrocketed up and left the country with a post-war headache."

Edward R. Stettinius, jr., in charge of the raw materials division:

A railroad in Brazil will have to be rebuilt to obtain needed supplies of high-grade manganese—an indispensable alloy for the manufacture of steel.

The commission is discussing with industry plans for the production of emergency supplies of synthetic rubber, which "for certain purposes—including some airplane parts—is definitely superior to crude rubber."

Karl W. Fischer, assistant to Ralph Budd, in charge of the transportation division:

Steps already are being taken to strengthen 2,000 bridges in the country's 80,000-mile network of strategic highways so that they will carry the heaviest military equipment.

Jones' announcemenet of loans for "half a dozen" plane factories came while he was testifying before the House Banking and Currency Committee in favor of a bill to authorize a $500,000,000 expansion of the Export-Import Bank's lending power, partly to finance industrial exports to Latin America.

The Packard Motor Co. will get about $8,000,000 of the defense loan funds to help it turn out Rolls-Royce airplane engines, Jones said.

He told the committee the RFC had already committed itself to loans under the defense program totaling $700,000,000.

The money is to be used for purchase of strategic materials, as well as construction of new munitions plants.

U. S. Sleuths Investigate Injured Stewardess' Story of Slugging by Passenger in Airliner

the investigation, said that the mail would be impounded. He refused to say whether the mail included anything of value or significance.

The Plainsman, 14-passenger transport on which Miss Griffith was serving, stopped off here at Washington Airport at 5:35 p. m., Wednesday, took on eight passengers and food supplies, and departed at 6:07 for Nashville, Tenn.

Found Unconscious

The stewardess was found unconscious in the ladies' lounge of the skliner a half hour before Nashville was reached and was taken to a Nashville hospital.

The early theory of American Airlines officials here and in Nashville was that Miss Griffith, having served dinner to the 14 passengers, had become faint and collapsed, swallowing the key as she fell. They pointed out that stewardesses were in the habit of carrying keys in their mouths.

Late yesterday Paul Stanley, American Airlines manager at Nashville, interviewed Miss Griffith in the hospital and later made this statement:

"Miss Griffith says that she was leaning over in a corner in the ladies' lounge and some man whispered: 'Give eme the key. Give me the key or I'll slug you.'

"Then, she said, she felt a heavy blow on the head. She said she saw no one. She said as she lay on the floor she swallowed the key to the baggage compartment. She said she never saw anyone in the room.

"She said that after she swallowed the key she remembered nothing until she was revived. Miss Griffith said the attack occurred about one-half hour before the plane was due in Nashville."

Federal officials—including postal inspectors — and Nashville police were pondering a number of questions. How, they wanted to know, could a man get into the ladies' lounge without being seen by other passengers, half of whom would be facing in that direction? The seats on a sky-sleepeer are like those in a railroad coach, half facing one way, half the other.

The key which Miss Griffith carried, air line officials here said, was about the size of an automobile ignition key. They said it was a master key that opened the baggage compartment in the rear and the mail compartments in the forward part of the plane, on either side of an alleyway leading to the pilot's compartment.

Roy Mitchell, assistant operations manager in charge of flight personnel, who hurried from New York to Nashville, said the Plainsman's cargo consisted only of mail, express and passengers and "nothing of especial value as far as I know."

When this investigation is completed," he said, "I will give a complete, detailed account of the case."

Miss Griffith, a native of Springfield, Mass., was discovered in the lounge when a passenger went forward and complained to Capt. James E. Stroud that the cabin was uncomfortably warm and that the stewardess had not appeared for "some time." Capt. Stroud found her lying on the floor unconscious.

Suffered Bruises

An examination in the Nashville hospital, besides revealing the key she swallowed, showed that she had suffered bruises.

Dr. Joe T. Whitfield, who treated her, described Miss Griffith as "nervous" and said she didn't sleep all night and was very upset." When she gave the statement to Stanley, he said, she "seemed to be mentally normal, but generally nervous."

No Passengers Held

"None of the passengers is under suspicion and all have been allowed to leave," Cotton said.

However, he gave orders that the passenger list be kept secret.

Helen Gahagan, the actress, star of "She," "Chains" and "Dreams for Sale," was a passenger on the plane and was among those who transferred at Nashville and went on to Los Angeles.

"The stewardess served dinner and seemed in good health," she said.

Shortly after dinner Miss Griffith was found unconscious.

"We were all frightened—afraid she would die in the air," said Miss Gahagan.

Ticklish Situation In New Hampshire

Rochester, N. H., Aug. 8 (AP).—"Tickling the feet of a minor without her consent"—that old New Hampshire statute was invoked today.

A 30-year-old man was convicted after a 15-year-old girl reported he entered her bedroom and awakened her by tickling her feet. Instead of screaming, she turned on the light and recognized him.

The man was given a three-months sentence in the house of correction.

Does America Favor Conscription?

In Sunday's Post— Gallup Poll, by States, on Compulsory Training

Congressmen report their mail is running strongly against conscription. Is this a true reflection of the country's sentiments, or are these anti-conscription letters coming from pressure groups?

The Gallup Poll asked voters in each State if they favor a draft of men between the ages of 18 and 32. The report—by States—appears in Sunday's Post. To know exactly where America stands on conscription read this important poll in Sunday's Post.

A.F.L. Leader Hits D.C. Units' Actions

Coyne Blames Union Heads for Strike Epidemic

"Irresponsible leadership" among local building trades union leaders was blamed yesterday by John P. Coyne, head of the Building Trades Department of the American Federation of Labor, for what he termed the "epidemic of strikes over jurisdictional disputes" on local projects.

Coyne made the charge at a press conference yesterday when he announced settlement of the week-old strike at the Social Security Building arising from a jurisdictional dispute between plasterers and carpenters.

The dispute between the plasterers and carpenters was over installation of 750,000 feet of acoustical tile at the Social Security and Railroad Retirement Board buildings. Assistant Secretary of Labor Dan W. Tracy had made every effort to settle the controversy.

300 Return to Work

Coyle said an agreement was reached whereby the plasterers and carpenters share equally with bricklayers in the installation of acoustics on the project.

Under the agreement the 300 members of the plasters' union will return to work today and no further issues are to be raised until the project is finished sometime around October.

Coyne credited Tracy and Joseph Keenan, former president of the Chicago Building Trades Council, and a special representative of Defense Commissioner Sidney Hillman, with settlement of the strike which had been "outlawed" by A. F. of L. President William Green.

Says Discipline Needed

He gave no credit to local union officials who he said had been attending too many Washington meetings, and were in "need of discipline."

Settlement of the strike removed the last obstacle to early completion of the Social Security and other Government buildings which are being constructed as part of the national defense program.

Federal officials Wednesday used their good offices to settle the strike of building laborers against local brickyards which tied up work on nearly ten Government buildings and a number of private construction jobs.

Coyne pointed out that the strikes had not seriously slowed up work on the defense units, because an agreement had been made to remove pickets at the defense projects a few hours after the brick strike had been declared. In the case of the plasterers and carpenters over installation of acoustics, he added, this did not curtail work to a great extent because the acoustical work was usually last step in the construction.

22 Years a Refugee

Empress Fled With Only Hope, Hope of Peace in Her Austria

Former Ruler and Son, Archduke Otto, Dream of Strong Danubian Federation, Uniting States Now Under Hitler's Sway

By Inez Robb

International News Service Staff Writer

(The second of a series of three articles.)

Royalston, Mass., Aug. 8.—Hope does not die in the brave. And no one can deny that the former Empress Zita of Austria-Hungary is a brave woman, facing with unquestionable fortitude a life that for almost half her years has been one calculated to break the spirit of all but the invincible.

For 22 years she has fled first from one European country to another with her eight children and her diminishing and impoverished household, always hoping, hoping that eventually there would be peace and plenty for the lands she once ruled.

When finally Europe became such a shambles that on the whole continent there was no longer a haven for her, she came to America last month. Yet when she started her flight from Belgium to America, the only possession she had time to salvage was hope. Today, in this peaceful New England countryside, she said it was still with her.

She is certain that eventually peace and happiness will be restored to Europe, but how or when she cannot even guess. She only knows that it will not be until after Hitler and Hitlerism are destroyed.

In her brand of hope, there is no alloy of easy optimism. She is certain that events in Europe will get worse, perhaps much worse, before they get better. She fears a terrible famine. Her private sources of information reveal circumstances so dire in Poland alone that it will be a miracle if the population survives another winter.

But she is convinced that Hitler has swallowed more than he can digest. Eventually revolt will start in one country, and it will spread among the oppressed peoples who hate him. The French assuredly will not long endure any yoke, she believes.

The empress, like her son, the Archduke Otto, dreams of a Danubian federation to unite into a powerful, self-sustaining whole many of Europe's smaller states which have either been gobbled up by Hitler or have fallen under Nazi sway.

But the former Empress is emphatic in her insistence that such a federation must result from the will and wishes of the peoples involved. It must be arrived at by democratic processes if it is to be of lasting benefit. This pale, ascetic woman in black finds it not at all contradictory that a former Empress should so warmly espouse the cause of democracy.

With a pleasant smile, she said that under the Hapsburgs the Kingdom of Austria had not been an autocracy, as is commonly believed. Democratic processes had long been in use. The peoples in the Danubian Basin must again have free choice and self-determination, once Hitler and his kind have been vanquished and Europe faces a new day.

Just what the new day may mean for Europe or her own family, no one can say. As the Empress spoke of the Old World, her glance wandered around the quiet and peace of her refuge in the New.

The former Empress believes the new Europe will tend toward constitutional and democratic monarchies. But if she still hopes and believes that such a return to the monarchial form of government will eventually restore her son, Archduke Otto, to a throne, she does not say. If in America, as in Europe, her energies and undeniable talents are turned on this goal, she does not discuss it.

Her conviction that Europe will again turn to monarchy is based on her belief that, first, there will be a final revulsion from totalitarianism, and, second, that the republics established in Europe following the World War have failed to work or to offer their peoples a maximum of protection. Such republics were invariably ruled by a clique and not through true democratic principles.

These peoples are not yet educated to a democracy such as Switzerland's, which she finds most admirable. A monarchy would again offer them something permanent to tie to, and she believes that after these recent decades of uncertainty and impermanence, that will mean much to men and women who long for rest and security.

On her way from Belgium through France, Spain and Portugal to the United States, the former empress was amazed to discover that many persons do not realize that Naziism and Bolshevism are one and the same thing.

It is wishful-thinking, in her opinion, to believe that eventually the world will be saved by a war in which the Nazis and the Bolshevists will fall upon and destroy each other. They are—she feels—as alike as peas in a pod and will not convenience the world by obliterating each other. She is apprehensive now lest Finland, for which one of her brothers fought valiantly last winter, suffer the fate of Lithuania, Esthonia and Latvia.

The one-time empress has been said to harbor vaunting ambitions for her children, but today she said she wished only that their lives be useful to others as well as themselves. She is proud of the work of her eldest son, Archduke Otto, in aiding Austrian refugees here and abroad. Many such Austrians, if they had fallen into German hands, would have been killed. Her eldest son, she believes, has never been so busy or so happy as in this country.

Her second son, Archduke Robert, is her only child not now in America. He is in England, in the British defense forces. As anxiously as any other mother, she asked me what I thought were England's chances to withstand the threatened German assault. She thinks they are excellent.

If You Dine Out, Watch Your Coat—Justice Is Blind

Keep an alert eye on your hat and coat in public eating places from now on because Judge Nathan Cayton ruled in Small Claims Court yesterday that proprietors are not responsible for their safe-keeping.

He dismissed a suit brought by Carl A. Auerbach, of Arlington, Va., who sought $38.25 for the loss of his hat and coat in a restaurant in the 1200 block of E street northwest last April 24. Judge Cayton held that there is no statute covering the loss of wearing apparel in public restaurants, adding:

"I am not unmindful of the social aspect of cases of this kind, nor of the contention which may be made that restaurant keepers ought, as a public duty, be required to provide protection to their patrons which would in every case guard them against loss."

Judge Cayton contended, however, that patrons who hang up their coats and hats while eating actually have not relinquished custody of them and it is their responsibility to watch out for snatchers.

Reasons For Haste

The excess profits tax plan approved by the House Ways and Means subcommittee offers corporations a choice between taxation of earnings in excess of a 4-year average or taxation of earnings in excess of a fixed percentage of invested capital.

Under this plan corporations enjoying high earnings in recent years would not be compelled to pay excess profits taxes on average or normal earnings. And concerns with relatively poor earnings in the base years would be protected against payment of heavy excess profits taxes on what might be a very modest rate of return. This optional arrangement appears to offer a satisfactory solution of a knotty problem of computation, although there will, of course, be administrative difficulties in determining what constitutes invested capital for taxation purposes.

Reports indicate that the allowances for depreciation of defense plants and equipment are also liberal, the amortization period being five years, with large write-offs if the emergency should be of shorter duration. Since the Administration has insisted upon incorporating these amortization provisions in the excess profits tax bill, it is imperative that the tax measure be passed without delay. For uncertainty over this matter of write-offs is holding up defense contracts.

That Congressional leaders appreciate the importance of speedy action is shown by the decision of the Ways and Means Committee and the Senate Finance Committee to hold joint hearings. Meantime efforts are being made to induce industry to proceed with defense contracts by giving informal pledges that the amortization provisions of the tax bill will stand. Promises, however, will hardly suffice in view of the possibility that the pending bill may be amended from the floor. Representative Voorhis has already given notice of his intention to fight for elimination of the amortization provisions.

Industrialists are prepared for heavy taxation of profits due directly or indirectly to the defense program, and the knowledge that they are to be thus taxed does not prevent them from negotiating defense contracts. But they dare not incur obligations for new plants and equipment unless they have reasonable assurance against the losses that might result if they were not permitted to write off the cost of such capital outlays within the time needed to complete the defense program.

War And Hunger

Ambassador John Cudahy has not relieved the food situation in Europe by his undiplomatic remarks in London. He has called attention to what is likely to be a problem of increasing gravity. But the effect of his remarks has been only to intensify the unwillingness of the British to permit the shipment of food and other supplies for civilians in German-occupied territory.

The British justify this policy on two grounds: First, that there need be no real famine in Europe if the food stocks there are evenly rationed by the Nazis among all populations; second, that extensive outside relief activities in the invaded countries would work to the military advantage of Hitler.

The first of these points finds some confirmation in the reports recently published by our own Department of Agriculture. However, the department experts seem to fear that Europe's sudden economic dislocations and the huge concentrations of penniless refugees may make an equitable distribution of food impossible, even if attempted.

The second point, that American food shipments to Europe would constitute an important military asset for Hitler, must be analyzed in the light of the current strategic situation. The European struggle has entered a phase wherein it resembles on a magnified scale the siege warfare of antiquity and of the Middle Ages. Indeed, an interesting paradox about the European War is that it now consists of two great simultaneous sieges, apart from various minor sieges in Africa and the Mediterranean.

Now in siege warfare, which makes no distinction between civil population and military garrison, hunger has often been the decisive weapon. More than once hunger and its attendant horrors have forced the capitulation of beleaguered fortresses; by the same token hunger and disease have caused sieges to be abandoned.

So the American Red Cross may have no opportunity to spend the $75,000,000 appropriated or donated for the express purpose of feeding and otherwise aiding the beleaguered population of Europe. The British are doubtless deeply concerned over the probability that continental Europe will be on pitifully short rations this winter, if the war continues. At the same time they realize that Hitler's police problem will be enormously complicated by food shortages that encourage a psychology of revolt. And they are determined to meet total warfare with total war.

A Salutary Trend

A healthy spirit of competition in tightening up the law against political corruption is evident in the developments of the last week. Attorney General Jackson has asked Congress to close the loopholes which Henry P. Fletcher, general counsel for the Republican National Committee, has found in the Hatch Act. And Wendell Willkie has asked for additional far-reaching safeguards against corrupt practices.

Mr. Jackson hastily rejected Mr. Fletcher's interpretation of the Hatch Act's limitations on campaign expenditures. Nevertheless he is asking for clarification of this measure. He sees a very real probability that, as the language of the act now stands, its spirit can be easily evaded. The astonishing thing is that Congress itself did not discover the broad loopholes in those sections of the statute dealing with campaign expenditures when the legislation was passed.

It required a good deal of courage on Mr. Jackson's part to advocate, also, penalties for those who plan and sell political campaign books and advertising in such books. In the past the Department of Justice has ignored evasion of the Corrupt Practices Act through the sale of Democratic campaign books to corporations. Mr. Jackson now calls for penalties for those who sell such campaign books as well as for those who buy them.

Mr. Willkie has made a still more far-reaching contribution to the cause of clean politics. He would prohibit members of the President's family or the families of other high governmental officials from receiving money from any person or corporation for services in the transaction of business with the Government and its agencies. The original Hatch Act serves to minimize the influence of politics among administrative employes of the Government. Mr. Willkie's suggestion would free Federal agencies from a particularly dangerous type of outside political pressure.

The Republican Presidential candidate also calls for a listing of assets on the part of the President, members of the Cabinet and important regulatory commissions when they assume office and when they leave it. This proposal should be carefully examined. At the moment it is interesting chiefly as an illustration of how far Mr. Willkie is willing to go in divorcing public service from private interests.

It may be surprising to some that proposals to tighten up the provisions of the Hatch Act are coming from prominent figures in both parties at the beginning of a national campaign. A year ago many politicians feared that the Hatch Act had already gone too far. Now its provisions have been extended to State employes receiving Federal funds and important new safeguards against political abuses are under discussion.

Together these developments are a salutary indication that the need for higher standards of public service is being generally recognized.

The Child Refugee Bill

Whatever their purpose may have been, the amendments tacked on to the Hennings bill before it was passed by the House of Representatives seem pointless and irrelevant. Still it is difficult to follow the logic whereby Chairman Bloom of the Military Affairs Committee has convinced himself that these amendments make it "impossible for the bill to operate."

As presented to the House, the bill would have permitted unarmed American ships, plainly marked as such, to be sent in ballast into the European war zones for the single purpose of removing refugees under 16 years of age, provided guarantees of safe conduct could be obtained from all belligerents. One of the amendments specifies that large American flags "visible from the air" must be painted on the sides and superstructures of the ships. Another makes State laws governing the legal responsibilities of parents applicable to those Americans who will stand in loco parentis to the young refugees. This provision seems gratuitous, but otherwise unobjectionable.

A third amendment which would make it impossible for the children to be accompanied on the voyage by nurses or teachers of their own nationality seems both gratuitous and harsh. Homesickness would certainly be rife for a time among the evacuees who, at best, would have difficulty enough to adjust themselves to alien surroundings. It is to be hoped that the Senate will strike out this provision. But even that is much less important than getting the bill to the President's desk as soon as possible.

Since the British are not inclined to mitigate their blockade restrictions so as to permit American relief agencies to distribute food on the continent, there is increased possibility that the Germans and Italians may, by way of reprisal, refuse to guarantee the safety of refugee ships passing to or from Great Britain. But this possibility must not be taken as an excuse for evading our plain obligation to see that every obstacle to this manifest task of human decency is removed from our own lawbooks.

The National Guard Bill

In approving the National Guard bill yesterday by the encouraging vote of 71 to 7 the Senate took a constructive step forward in strengthening the defenses of the United States at a critical hour in the world's history.

There is a disposition in some quarters to assume that the United States has all the time in the world to build up its defenses. No assumption could be more dangerous. When we are faced by a runaway situation in which every free nation is menaced, time is the essence of our problem.

Given our population and our unexampled resources, there is no doubt that we could build up an adequate personnel for our Army, Navy and Air Force by slow and easy stages. We cannot afford to be leisurely in present circumstances. And while our new defense machine is being built we have to depend on the forces we have to meet whatever emergency may arise.

In the case of the Army this force is pitifully small. It is that fact which made it essential to give the President authority to call out the National Guard for additional intensive training and to send detachments of the Guard, if necessary, to any part of the Western Hemisphere.

The measure as it finally passed the Senate differed in some particulars from the bill as originally introduced. Married men with dependents will be permitted to resign from the National Guard during a period of 20 days following enactment of the legislation. There is much to be said for this provision.

Fortunately the Adams amendment that would have prohibited the employment of the National Guard outside continental United States and its possessions was defeated although by only one vote. To have limited the measure in that way would have made it difficult for the United States to carry out its obligations under the Monroe Doctrine.

Money Where Needed

The bill to increase the District's gasoline tax should be examined carefully with reference to local needs. Uniformity of District with State laws is desirable, but not at the cost of an unnecessary burden—if it is unnecessary—on a section of the tax-paying public.

Under the present system, which segregates gasoline tax receipts for the highway fund, a 50 per cent increase would result either in the piling up of a large surplus or in expenditures out of all proportion to other outlays by the District administration.

This year, with a highway fund of nearly $5,000,000 out of a total budget of less than $50,000,000, the city is spending $950,000 on the Pennsylvania avenue and Massachusetts avenue bridges.

Such projects as these are useful but not immediately pressing. Other aids to traffic, which would be possible if the funds were increased by half, may be put in the same class. Yet the lack of money for the Home for the Aged and Infirm, the Children's Receiving Home and similar institutions has caused pitiable conditions.

It has been the contention of many that revenue from gasoline should go into the general fund, so that the District might spend money where money is needed. If the tax is to be increased, the even greater comparative affluence of the Highway Department will lend added support to this view.

War In His Teeth

From the Memphis Commercial Appeal

There's a man in Canada to whom the war is something more than mobilization at home or bombings in England. The war, or rather one of its ramifications, has cost him his store teeth and he's wondering how long he can live on soup.

This Canadian sent his molars to the United States for repairs before restrictions on sending out money were imposed, and now he can't pay to get them back because of those restrictions. And the dental firm doesn't feel like sending the teeth free.

War's a strange thing and strikes in odd ways, as this item finally proves.

"With its fast, modern presses, the Treasury can print money at the rate of 303,000 pieces a minute."—Newspaper filler. When inflation comes, we'll be ready for it.

Aw, don't worry so much about the condition of the world—your sojourn here is highly temporary.

"The people of this country now pay about as much for sin as for government." Neither is worth what it costs.

We had a horrible experience yesterday. For two hours we were lost in a rented bathing suit.

Waste In Government

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Senator William H. King's few remarks concerning Government employes, who during the course of a warm summer day step out for a cool drink and snack, seem small in face of some wastage of time and money which is hidden from the general public.

Government departments are still spending the taxpayers' money and the taxpayers naturally want the most for it. Senator King could much better prevent wastage of time and money by investigating a few methods in which Government appropriations are spent rather than clutter up his busy days making Government employes more uncomfortable. Democrats

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Mr. "Bolter in the Ranks" seemingly bolted the Democrats before Mr. Willkie did. I'm not sure that he is so "red-hot," but I think Mr. Willkie is a very good Democrat—just of the sore-back variety. From all that I have gleaned from Mr. Willkie's attitude on major issues, the oncoming contest is between a New Deal Democrat and a sore-back Democrat, both most excellent and patriotic men. However, should Mr. Willkie let it be known that he would seek to wipe out New Deal accomplishments, such as insured bank deposits; protection against "blue-sky" security sales and manipulations, through which billions of dollars have been filched from the investing public; the CCC and numerous other important measures, which, regardless, must become fixtures in Government; why, Mr. Willkie would not get to first base! Again, why dispose of the pioneer for a copy artist, no matter how good he is, or we think he is?

Hitler's Youth And Ours

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I happen to have been in Germany "under Hitler," and while there I kept my eyes and ears open. And when I compare the incredible hardness, the self-immolation, the fierce fervor, the messianic fanaticism of Hitler's young men, hell-bent for world conquest, with the spirit evinced in The Post of August 5 by a young letter writer, I almost despair of the future of my country. If I believed that he expressed the true spirit of American youth (which I don't) I would do one of two things—either (1) begin applying liniment to my right shoulder, in order to snap the arm up with a smart "Heil Hitler!", or (2) plug up the cracks around the kitchen door and turn on the gas.

He says "No one has done anything to me yet" and (further along) "If and when the time comes to defend my country I will fight." We have here, in all its crude simplicity, the attitude of the Nyes, Holts, Wheelers and Bennett Clarks. The concept hasn't a leg to stand on. He will wait placidly and do nothing while the Nazis seize Greenland, Newfoundland, the Hudson Bay region, Bermuda and Trinidad—while they make their concentrations and establish their deadly airdromes. Unless our actual shores or borders are attacked he won't lift a finger, even though Nazi encroachments make those shores and borders indefensible. He will wait till Hitler's torpedo boats are tearing up Casco Bay, or Hitler's armored columns are roaring into Buffalo, or Hitler's bombers from Bermuda have blown his home here to bits—and then, I assume, he will rush valiantly to the colors to "defend his country" by clawing at the Panzer divisions with his fingernails!

Are such American youth utterly blind? Are they devoid of capacity for "visualization" or foresight? Do they never read the press or see the newsreel? Are they blankly ignorant of the writings of Rauschning, Tollschus, Rosenberg, Ross—and Hitler? Are they unaware of the Nazi conspiracies and the corrupting, corroding drives in all of Latin America? Can they not perceive that civilization is menaced by a ghastly peril unequalled since the fall of Rome? And can they not see that we Americans simply cannot—must not—wait until the dreadful lunge of the enemy is already directed at us before we take the simple fundamental measures necessary to defend ourselves?

That letter writer doesn't manifest the faintest disposition to make any sacrifice. He wants everything his own way. He wants it all handed to him on a platinum platter—his education, his training in the newspaper profession, his liberty of choice, his individual satisfaction—but he's not willing to give so much as a year of his life to the preservation of the Nation and the splendid way of life that make all these things possible for him.

He wants an education. Does he want the education of a Hitler "school for barbarians," in which truth and tolerance and genuine science play no part at all, but all instruction is geared solely to the "needs of the party," with resultant frightful distortions and suppressions of fact? He wants a wife. Does he want a wife confined to the kitchen, with her intellectual capacities choked? Presumably he wants children. Does he want little brats who spy on him and run and tattle to the Gestapo? He wants to be a newspaperman. Does he want to work on a paper where every single story, every editorial comment, is dictated (with astounding falsities and monsensicalities) by a department of propaganda? He doesn't want to be a soldier. But does he want to be a slave—like an Austrian citizen crawling and scrubbing in the gutter with a Nazi boot at his posterior—or a Czech professor set to rummaging loathsome garbage—or a Polish violinist butchered with cold ruthlessness by the S. S. men because he wasn't quick enough in betraying his fellow countrymen?

That's just what he is going to get if he and others are unwilling to serve in the vital defense forces of this Nation. Hitler is bent on world conquest. The Nazis are coming here—unless we prevent them. Those facts ought to be shouted over a dozen Nation-wide hook-ups, because they are incontrovertible. We Americans can be saved from shattering disaster only by the eager willingness of all of us to serve in our defense forces. F. L. P.

What Of 18-21?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There have been thousands of words written recently on the subject of the proposed conscription law; but at no time have I seen any reason given for the elimination of the age group 18 to 21.

As I understand it, this proposed law is to be a fixed long-term policy; for an all-time future preparedness; and not just to cover the present so-called emergency. If such is the case; and from now on, every young man will be required to serve for one year in national defense; there are many good reasons why the draft should start with the age of 18. The men should be called up by age, starting at 18, until the required number of men have been trained; and every year the subsequent class of 18 should be trained.

Here are some of the reasons I feel the draft should start at the age of 18:

1. The average young man who has been fortunate enough to attend high school, graduates at about 18.

2. The young man who does not attend high school is still an apprentice, or at least is not well established in a business or trade at that age.

3. Few young men at that age are married or have financial commitments; such as paying for a house or insurance.

4. Young men of that age are in better physical condition than older men and are also quicker at learning.

5. Military training and the discipline of military life will not hurt any man; and least of all, those of 18.

I have talked to a number of young men of 18 and 19 and they agree that if they are to be required to serve a year's training, they would rather do it now than wait until they are 21. Also, some fathers of sons of that age feel the same way about it.

I enlisted in the last war at the age of 17, and though wounded in action, do not regret having spent 21 months in the Army.

On The Draft

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Quoting from Mr. Lindley's article in yesterday's Post, "The obligation to fight in defense of the Nation rests, in the last analysis, on every citizen." I don't believe Mr. Lindley completed his thought.

Or does he really believe that the Green House sons and the Van Snoots' son would actually be drafted and sent into barracks, eat Army mess, do K. P. duty, sleep on an Army cot, drill on a muddy field in hobnailed Army shoes, go with the sleety and icy winter winds breezing through summer undies and light-weight khakis until April 1 and then (because they were finally ready for distribution) spend the rest of the summer in heavy undies and olive-drab woolen uniforms, gradually dissolving under Old Sol's torrid rays?

The Post Impressionist

Of Hero Worship

MR. SABREL was nearing the end of a long and, I suppose, honorable career in which, among other incidents, he had been the principal prop of that organization locally called the "Thumpers." The Thumpers owed much to Mr. Sabrel, and on the fiftieth anniversary of his membership they did their loyal best to pay the debt. There was a dinner at the country club with speeches which included the usual number of cliches. There was a presentation; not a watch, because (at 80 years) time could not possibly interest Mr. Sabrel enough to warrant the expense. But there was a chair, in pseudo-Spanish leather, and there were boxes of cigars. It was felt that Mr. Sabrel could still appreciate a good cigar.

If little Ben had not been convinced, by his father's awe in telling all this, that Mr. Sabrel was a great man, he could not fail to understand, from the column in our county paper, that Mr. Sabrel had been associated with something pure and wise. Self-sacrifice, devotion, fidelity, vision, achievement—these were some of the words which caused little Ben's heart to pump faster. Little Ben had graduated from grammar school and was going to high in the fall, and he was susceptible to noble thoughts.

Little Ben was sitting on the grass by the War Memorial when Mr. Sabrel came by, smoking a presentation cigar. It was his habit to stroll on the "Commons" at twilight. He took his regular seat by the granite feet of the young soldier immortalized in stone. Little Ben thought, quite respectfully, that Mr. Sabrel looked a little like the very old turtle cherished in the back yard at home. Mr. Sabrel's eyes were small and like bits of unpolished topaz (also like Marco Polo, the turtle). The lids moved suddenly and seemed to come upward from the bottom, but of course that could not be so. A ray of gold light from the sunset glanced on the windows of the high school and reflected upon Mr. Sabrel's face. Little Ben thought that Heaven was conferring some of its own glory upon Mr. Sabrel.

Little Ben felt his small heart thud very fast, and he trembled. He had conceived an idea. What if he should speak to Mr. Sabrel and Mr. Sabrel should explain to him just what great thing he believed, what indeed he had thought and felt in 50 years of being a Thumper? Little Ben felt very humble. He longed to know just what shining meaning there was in being a Thumper. He thought he would like to be one some day. But first he must get inside the thing, as it were; wrap himself in its essence like a very small worm in a cocoon. He felt he could die for it if he could just understand.

He drew nearer to Mr. Sabrel. He stood awkwardly on one leg like a very young and fuzzy bird. He saw the turtle-like face gilded by the light against the background of the young granite soldier, memorial to boys who long years ago had tried, as he was doing now, to find that burning core of life where every longing and every imagining is fused and integrated.

Mr. Sabrel saw him, much as a turtle sees a fly. His eyes blinked rapidly with that old illusion about the lids.

"Hello, son! What are you staring at me for? Manners! Arumph!"

"My father told me about you, Mr. Sabrel. It was . . . great . . . just wanted to ask you . . ."

"Well, be quick!" The twilight was passing gently, and the street lamps now illuminated the square with a pale florescence of violet and of rose.

Little Ben did not know how to say it, but he tried.

"Mr. Sabrel, what is it to be a Thumper?"

"Why, you ignorant little cuss! Everybody knows what a Thumper is. Ain't we got the biggest membership in the country! Don't we have the biggest parades and conventions and banners? You should hear me make a speech! Don't ask foolish questions." And Mr. Sabrel creaked to his feet and down the path in the lovely summer dusk of a small town.

Little Ben was ashamed; he had failed. The great orb of truth had not flashed upon him. His oracle was dumb or if it had spoken he was not good at solving riddles. It is sad to the young to be willing to die and yet to be empty of cause!

Little Ben trudged home. As he crawled into bed he thought, "I am not worthy. I cannot enter into the great thoughts of great men . . . But why could not Mr. Sabrel tell me just a little what it is to be a Thumper?"

So Little Ben went to sleep; at least, that part of him slept which eats and plays ball and runs the town's sidewalks. But somewhere in a sleepless self, this aching question was answering itself as neatly as if an example in arithmetic could work its own solution. He woke a few hours later in the hot summer moonlight with the answer on his lips.

"Mr. Sabrel couldn't tell what it is to be a Thumper because he doesn't know himself."

Little Ben thought about it all night, while the calm ivory moon went on its way. He was not exactly resentful, but he was alert. If it was true that Mr. Sabrel, who had been a Thumper for 50 years, still didn't know what he, and they, believed in, it could be true about anybody, Republicans and Democrats and Socialists and even his father, oh, anybody!

At breakfast he was still thoughtful. When he had gone out, his mother turned to his father and said, "Little Ben doesn't seem like a very little boy any more. I think he is going to look like my own dear father. Yes, he'll soon be a man.

The Value of CCC

By Ernest K. Lindley

Youth Program Still Needed

THE BALANCING of the budget, which the Republicans have been grooming as a campaign issue for almost seven years, has been pushed into the indefinite future by the exigencies of national defense. But the demand that the huge outlays for national defense be offset in part by economies in the so-called "nonessentials" is arising again, and doubtless will be heard throughout the campaign.

In scouting around for "nonessentials" some of the economizers have now picked the Civilian Conservation Corps. They give as their reason the recent relaxation of the CCC regulations to permit the enrollment of youths from families with "moderate" incomes.

According to The Washington Post, "If the CCC finds that the quotas assigned to the several States are not filled, that evidently means that relief needs are less pressing and economies could be instituted with comparative ease."

Much of the work done by the CCC is not pressing, in the view of The Washington Post, and does not provide a great variety of opportunities for training. It thinks that if Government money is to be spent on training young men from nonrelief families, it could be spent more advantageously by financing vocational training in private industries.

VOCATIONAL training in private industries, properly safeguarded, can be of great value in the defense program now getting under way. It is perhaps true, also, that the CCC does not provide a great variety of opportunities for training. However, the training program of the CCC has been greatly enlarged in the last few years, and the emphasis from now on will be even more on training for useful civilian and noncombatant military jobs.

The unemployment problem among youth is much larger than is implied by The Washington Post and others who are beginning to urge a reduction in the CCC. Throughout the depression about one-third of all the unemployed have been found in the 16-24 age group.

The Biggers unemployment census in November and December, 1937, indicated that there were almost 4,000,000 unemployed in this age range. Of these almost 2,500,000 were boys. These were youths who were out of school and who wanted jobs, but were unable to find them. They did not include a large number who were being kept in school and college with help from the National Youth Administration. Nor did they include perhaps 1,750,000 partly employed young people who wanted regular jobs.

OF COURSE, these unemployed youth are not confined to families on relief. Must a boy of 18 or 21 or 23 be condemned to idleness because his father is employed? Regardless of the father's employment or station in life, the moral damage to a youth who cannot obtain useful work is a matter of serious national concern.

A great majority of these unemployed young people have never had regular jobs. They have never learned the habits of steady work, much less the skills which improve their chances to obtain steady work.

The CCC has not been strictly limited to boys from families on relief. It has been open all along to boys whose families might have gone on relief if they had not received the $20 or $25 a month from a son enrolled in the CCC. In 1937, when Congress made the CCC a semipermanent agency by authorizing its continuation for three years, and again in 1940, when the authorization was renewed for three years, the test of eligibility was "unemployed and in need of employment." This was a test of the need of the individual boy, not of the need of his family. By authority of Congress the CCC has been open, for three years, to boys from families eligible for relief, even if they were not on relief. For more than a year it has been open to boys from families whose living standard is below "normal" for the community in which they reside. The recent relaxation is only another slight broadening of the economic area from which CCC boys may be recruited. As in the past, youths from families on relief or eligible for relief receive the preference.

CONSCRIPTION, if approved by Congress, will reduce unemployment in the 21-24 age group. When some youths are to be called, by lot, to defend their country is precisely when it is most important that all young people be made to realize that there is a useful place for them in our society. The boys who enter the combatant services must feel that they are preparing to defend something that is worth defending. They cannot be expected to be enthusiastic about defending people so myopic as to condemn young people to idleness rather than to pay them modest sums to conserve the natural resources of the Nation and to acquire training which will make them more useful citizens, through subagencies of the CCC and the NYA.

Fair Enough

Conscript Wealth?

EXCUSE ME, friends, but do I understand you to say that if men are to be conscripted for military training or war, then wealth should be conscripted, too?

Because, before I bet on that proposition I want to take another squint at my hand.

Now, as I read the cards I observe that men are conscripted to defend the wealth of a country because the life and freedom of the people are based on the possession of that wealth. And, of course, it sounds handsome to say that the wealth of a nation should belong equally to all the people, but if you will take a look around you will observe that freedom exists only in those countries in which the wealth, or most of it, is privately owned and shifted from one possessor to another in constant toil, trade, competition and speculation.

I don't know why it works out that way, but it does. In Russia, Germany and Italy the wealth belongs entirely to the state, or, in your way of speaking, to all the people, equally, and the result is that no individual, except the few bosses, has any wealth at all or any of the rights that Americans enjoy.

THEY CAN'T speak out of turn. They can be shot for reading forbidden material or listening to forbidden stations on the air; they have to work where they are put as many hours as they are told to; they can't quit one job to seek another or sass the boss or strike or even mention the idea of organizing a union.

And they have to serve in armies and fight in wars, too, even with no prospect of acquiring any wealth of their own if they happen not to be killed.

When the war is over, if they live, back they go to their tasks. The farmer is staked to his farm on a short tether, and, though he may think he owns it, that is only an illusion. Let him fall behind the production figured out for him by the nation and they chase him down the road, and his family with him, and give the farm to someone else who will work harder and better and for a bare living.

Or if he just happens to be in wrong with the local boss he can be chased off down the road or slapped into a concentration camp, where the guards will beat his ears off, while the farm is given to someone who happens to be in right with the boss—perhaps the boss' cousin or the father of some dolly that the boss is playing around with.

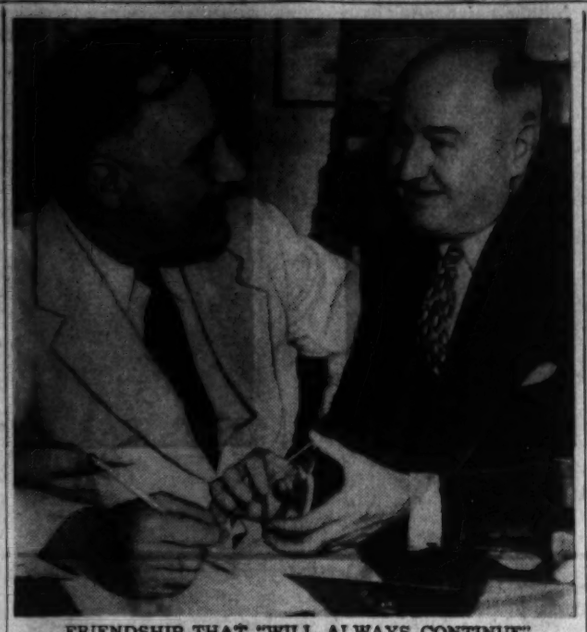
IF HE IS a white-collar or a hand worker in a plant he can be hoisted out of a job in his home town and sent somewhere 'way to hell and gone in a strange part of the country because they happen to need his kind of talent there.

That is what has to happen in a country where you conscript the wealth as well as the man. It has to happen, and it does happen, because when the government of a nation takes over the wealth it becomes the owner of all the farms and factories as well as the diamond bracelets and the stocks and bonds.

Wealth isn't just stock certificates and saw-bucks. It is the property, and when the government conscripts the property, then eventually the government becomes the only employer in the country, and its orders to the employes are not to be disregarded or argued, as in the free countries.

THE GOVERNMENT'S orders as the employer and the boss are not mere orders but law, and you know what happens when you disobey a law of the government, especially in time of national danger. They send for the secret police and give you a quick trial, and you go to the clink if they don't take a notion to shoot you.

So, on reading my hand carefully, I have to bet against your proposition that wealth should be conscripted along with men. If you are going to do that there is no reason to conscript the men, because this country's only reason for doing that is to fight off the very thing that would happen here the minute we decided to conscript wealth.



FRIENDSHIP THAT "WILL ALWAYS CONTINUE"
The above photograph was made in the period of "close personal association" mentioned by President Roosevelt in accepting Postmaster General Farley's resignation. Farley's Resignation

Texts Of Letter And Roosevelt's Reply

By the Associated Press

Hyde Park, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Here are the texts of the letter of resignation of James A. Farley as Postmaster General and President Roosevelt's reply:

August 7, 1940.

Honorable Franklin D. Roosevelt, The White House, Washington, D. C.

My dear Mr. President:

In accordance with my several conversations with you wherein I indicated the necessity for my returning to private life, I tender you, with sincere regret, my resignation as Postmaster General of the United States, to become effective at the close of business on August 31, 1940.

I want you to know how much I appreciate the honor you conferred upon me and the trust that you placed in me when you appointed me to this important position in your Cabinet, when you took office on March 4, 1933.

Whatever success I may have had in the conduct of the affairs of the Postal Service is due in a large measure to the splendid assistance and cooperation which I have received not only from my associates in the department here in Washington, but also from postmasters and postal employes in every branch of the service throughout the country.

DURING my two terms as Postmaster General we have succeeded in placing the postal establishment on a self-sustaining basis with respect to that part of the service that is rendered to the public for hire; we have reduced the hours of labor from forty-four to forty hours a week; we have extended the air mail service by thousands of miles, including the inauguration of the transatlantic and transpacific services; we have supervised the erection of hundreds of new postoffice buildings in every State and Congressional district in the Nation; we have reduced postal expenditures by several millions of dollars while at the same time doing a record business in both volume and receipts, climaxed by a new all-time high of $786,000,000, in the matter of postal revenues, for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1940.

We have provided new and increased services, and we have likewise performed several outstanding services for other Government agencies, such as the handling and payment of the soldiers' bonus, the registration of workers under the Social Security program, the taking of a census of the unemployed and the sale of millions of dollars of United States savings bonds for the Treasury Department.

THESE ARE some of the outstanding accomplishments of the Postal Service during my period of service as Postmaster General, but what has pleased me more than anything else is the manner in which the department's relations with its employes in every branch of the service have been carried on.

Through our cooperation with the employes' organizations, we have succeeded in bringing about a new spirit of friendliness and devotion to duty in the ranks of the more than 300,000 postal employes and I doubt if the morale of the postal workers has ever been higher than it is at the present time.

The department has also been particularly fortunate in its relations with the committees in the Senate and the House of Representatives. Senator Kenneth McKellar, chairman of the Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads in the Senate, has been extremely kind and helpful, and most efficient, and has aided the department materially in legislation which is handled by his committee.

DURING the time that Senator James M. Mead was chairman of the Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads in the House of Representatives, we had extremely friendly relations with him, and our relations with the present chairman, Congressman Milton A. Romjue, have been extremely pleasant.

All of the members of both committees in the Senate and in the House have been of great assistance to me and my associates in the department.

During my lifetime I shall cherish the associations and friendships which I have made while serving as Postmaster General, both in the Postal Service and in the other departments and agencies of the Federal Government.

I know that it will please you to learn that I have made definite arrangements for my future in private business where I know I shall be very happy.

Again expressing my deepest gratitude for the opportunity you afforded me to serve as a member of your Cabinet, and with kindest personal regards, I am, faithfully yours,

JAMES A. FARLEY.

THE PRESIDENT'S reply:

Dear Jim:

I accept, with real regret, your resignation as Postmaster General, to become effective at the close of business on August 31.

First of all, I want to tell you of my own sincere sorrow that we are losing you as a member of the official family. At the same time, as I have told you, I fully understand and appreciate the personal reasons which recall you to private business after all these unselfish years in the public service. I congratulate you on your new work and send you every wish that it may, in every way, be successful.

UNDER YOUR administration the Postoffice Department of the United States has made great strides in business efficiency, in service to the public, and in the outstanding morale of its more than three hundred thousand employes. That the Postoffice Service is on a completely self-sustaining basis with respect to that part that is rendered to the public for hire is in itself a real tribute to you and your associates.

All of us in the Administration will miss you deeply; we count on seeing you often. I especially count on this after all of our years of close personal association. Our friendship will always continue.

I need not tell you that you have always my affectionate regards. Faithfully yours,

(Signed)
FRANKLIN D. ROOSEVELT.

River Tales

HERE IS Harry Emerson Wildes' "The Delaware" (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50), tenth in the Noble Rivers of America Series planned by Constance Lindsay Skinner.

Middletown, Del., was Mr. Wildes's birthplace; Valley Forge, on the Little Schuylkill, is his home. Accordingly his book deals primarily with those lower reaches of the Delaware settled by the Dutch and the Swedes, the Quakers and the pietistic Germans. He begins, to be sure, with old Dan Skinner, admiral of the raft fleet, who piloted 80-foot pine logs from the Catskill foothills to Philadelphia and walked back through the forests with his pockets full of gold long before the Revolution made Philadelphia the temporary capital of a nation. But he never pauses to explain how Dan swung his rafts over the falls; indeed, he flatly says that the Delaware has "virtually no rapids" below Hancock, a statement which will surprise a good many adventurous canoeists. And once he has remarked Dan's capacity for alcoholic celebration, Mr. Wildes's narrative of his river hardly ever sails out of tidewater.

That is well enough, for the lower Delaware is as rich in legend and lore as even the Hudson Valley. If it is unfortunate enough to have been named after an English earl who never saw it, New Yorkers can still proudly remember that their "North River" was so named by the Dutch to distinguish the Hudson from their other American river, the South River, that we now call the Delaware. Lesser place names are rich in memories. Mr. Wildes has much to say of Cornelis Jacobsen Mey, of Hoorn, in Holland, whose own name, misspelled, is preserved in Cape May. About the same time that another homesick Hollander was naming the farthest tip of South America after the same home town, Cornelis was giving its name to a little creek that enters the Delaware near its mouth. Hoornkill, he named it; but the English who came after him misunderstood his Dutch and called it Whorekill. It still bears that name, and several amateur philologists and historians have set down in print a legend that it was so named because the Indians of the region were generous in offering their women to white immigrants.

THE STORY of the Dutch and the Swedes on the Delaware has been well told by Christopher Ward and others. Mr. Wildes skips along to give fresh color to the school-worn figure of William Penn and to the great Indian chief with whom Penn treated. Tamend or Tammany, was his name, and, according to Mr. Wildes, he was so generous a chief that he became the patron figure of the plain people of America, honored as St. Tammany, a sacred symbol of freedom, justice and fair dealing, contrasted to the well-born St. George.

If Tammany in time moved over to Manhattan and, in the process, somewhat altered his tradition, Philadelphia developed an independent political tradition of its own. Mr. Wildes is kinder to the Quaker merchants of the City of Brotherly Love than some of its own historians have been. He interpolates comment on Lord Cornbury, who, wearing green silk skirts on the ramparts of his residence, somewhat discredited the cause of the Episcopalians; he is bitter about the Yankees who claimed, settled and long held against all invading forces the fertile Wyoming Valley; he recalls that French visitors to Revolutionary Philadelphia were shocked at the gambling, drinking and dancing habits of that traditionally sedate city; he claims for Tom McKean (1734-1817) the honor of being "America's first professional boss." (McKean, by the way, is a figure who deserves a modern biography. He held office in two States simultaneously, was on all sides of several fights, and, as a neglected signer of the Declaration of Independence, was probably the first to point out that it was not signed on July 4). In more recent years Mr. Wildes finds rich material in Matt Quay, Boies Penrose, who could outeat Diamond Jim Brady and do it with a Harvard accent, and the Vares.

"The Delaware is a gentle river," Mr. Wildes sums it up, "gracious and inviting; its charms are never-ending . . . Sedulously the stream and the folk who settle on its shores play down its virtues, frowning on all words and deeds that seem like boasting." . . . And such is the power of the Philadelphia tradition that I suspect Mr. Wildes wrote it with a straight face!

War In The Desert

By Barnet Nover

Italy's African Campaign

REDUCED to fundamentals, the ambitious and far-flung African campaign upon which Italy has now embarked is an attempt to outflank British sea power by military means.

Since her entry into the war Italy has kept the bulk of her fleet very much under cover. It is, experts say, a good fleet—for its size. But it is no match for Britain's Mediterranean navy. That is why the Italian assault on British sea power has thus far been confined to submarine attacks and air raids. Neither has proved to be particularly effective.

Yet unless British sea power can be overcome, Italy's plight may soon be desperate. She entered the war on a shoe-string. She has few resources to draw on; negligible reserves. The blockade operates against her with particular ferocity. And the cumulative force of that blockade may prove fatal.

BUT if British sea power cannot be overcome by a frontal attack by the Italian fleet plus the Italian air force, can it be eliminated as a factor, so far as Italy is concerned, by other methods?

Apparently the Italians believe so. At least, that is the meaning and significance of the attack on British Somaliland and the impending attack on Egypt and the Suez Canal.

The Italians are weak at sea, but they have a force in Libya and East Africa, under the command of Marshal Graziani, which considerably outnumbers the force with which the British can oppose them. Britain's garrison in Somaliland is believed to be negligible, although it can be reinforced by sea. Italy, on the other hand, has large and well-trained units in Ethiopia and has no longer anything to fear from the French in French Somaliland. Indeed, that French colony is reported to have been occupied by the Italians, adding still a new base of operations against the British.

SHOULD BRITISH Somaliland fall into Italian hands, Italy would be in occupation of the whole of the western shore of the Gulf of Aden and could thus harass by air British shipping moving in and out of the Red Sea through the Straits of Bab-el-Mandeb. The possession or control of French Somaliland also prevents an enemy sortie against Italian East Africa.

For the time being, however, the capture of British Somaliland, several towns of which have already been taken by Italian troops, would have greater prestige value than strategic importance. As long as the British are able to keep the Suez gate closed Italian garrisons in East Africa are cut off from home supplies and may thus, before long find themselves in a parlous position.

THE BEST and largest of Britain's garrisons in northeastern Africa are those protecting Egypt, the Suez Canal and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. They are inferior in numbers to the large force which Italy has massed in Libya and which is said to total 250,000 men. But they control the oases, are veterans of many campaigns in the desert and have the enormous advantage of being able to fight on the defensive in a region where to get too far from the water supply is to court disaster.

Yet if British naval power is to be circumvented an attack on Egypt and Suez must be undertaken, although there are substantial reasons for believing that it may not be undertaken in force until the German blitzkrieg against Britain reaches its height and coincident with a Spanish or Spanish-German-Italian assault on Gibraltar. If both ends of the Mediterranean are made untenable for the British, British sea power will no longer be a factor to plague the Italians.

BEYOND SUEZ are the oil wells of Irak, a particularly rich prize for the oil-poor Axis nations. Could Great Britain be forced to clear out of the Mediterranean, Germany's fighting capacity—and Italy's—would be considerably increased by the seizure of those wells, for oil happens to be the Achilles heel of the Axis.

But that goal is a long way off. The capture of the little port of Zeila, on the Gulf of Aden, of Hargesia and Oadweina, in the interior of British Somaliland, are feathers in the cap of the Italian army. Such feats make good headlines in the Fascist press. But, by themselves, they are of little importance in a war of such huge dimensions as that which is now opening up in northeast Africa for such tremendous stakes.

Indeed, for Great Britain Africa constitutes only a minor theater of the war. The major struggle, as they see it, is that about to take place on their home grounds. It is for that struggle that they are steeling themselves. And the circumstance that Mussolini appears to have given marching orders to his African legions will be proof positive to them that Hitler's assault on the British Isles will not be long delayed.

Clinical Report

You ask me were you fried last night,
Here's the mirror . . . you look a fright!
You threw dishes around the place
And hiccoughed in the hostess' face.
And couldn't you do something subtler
Than wrestle with the maid and butler?
You ship-ahoyed and tried to float
Aboard the silver gravy boat.
You caught your host by his white whiskus,
And tried to throw him like a discus.
You played the drums and led the band . . .
Then tried it standing on one hand!
You then played marbles with the peas
And carved "I love you" in the cheese.
What made you think that you were Tarzan
Standing there with just your scars on?
And don't you think it mighty queer
To swing upon the chandelier?
You knocked the guests for quite a goal
By casting in the goldfish bowl
Which was all right but tell me why,
For bait, you used my father's tie!

U. S. to Try First Utilities On Charges of 'Slush Fund'

Initial Cases to Be Instituted Against Union Electric and Affiliated Companies, All Subsidiaries of North American

For the first time, the Federal Government will bring the subsidiaries of a public utility holding company to the bar to answer charges of maintaining a political "slush fund."

The Department of Justice announced yesterday it would undertake grand jury proceedings against the Union Electric Co., of Missouri, and associated companies, all subsidiaries of the North American Co., giant holding firm.

The proceedings will be instituted in St. Louis, Mo., Springfield, Ill., and Des Moines, Iowa, the department said, to determine whether the companies named have violated Federal law by "making and keeping false records for the purpose of creating a so-called slush fund and using this fund to make contributions to candidates for election to Federal and State offices."

Companies Named

The companies to be investigated were named by the department as Union Electric, with more than $250,000,000 of assets; Illinois-Iowa Power Co., a $200,000,000 concern; Missouri Power and Light Co., with $22,000,000 assets, and certain affiliated companies.

North American, the top company to whom the others owe financial allegiance, has a controlling interest in Washington Railway & Electric Co. and the Potomac Light & Power Co., basic District public services.

The power firms were called to answer charges of violating the Securities Act of 1933, the Securities Exchange Act of 1934, the Public Utility Holding Company Act of 1935, the Mail Fraud Statute, the Federal Corrupt Practices Act and "other Federal criminal statutes."

In view of the Justice Department action, the Securities and Exchange Commission deferred for the present a proposed public investigation of the North American Co. and Union Electric. Three weeks ago the SEC rejected a demand by Edward L. Shea, North American president, that the hearings be thrown open to the public.

Official Convicted

The Justice Department said it based its action on information obtained during the secret SEC probe into the affairs of Union Electric and on testimony at the trial in St. Louis of Frank J. Boehm, former vice president of the company, who was convicted of perjury and sentenced to five years in prison because of false testimony during the commission's inquiry.

The original SEC investigation was begun at the request of Louis H. Egan, former president of Union Electric, and Boehm. When the SEC charged the company with making political contributions, the company brought an injunction suit to stop the hearing.

At the request of J. F. Fogarty, then president of North American, the SEC continued with a private inquiry and the aftermath was that Egan, Boehm and A. C. Laun, a vice president, withdrew from Union Electric.

Shea's recent demand that the hearings be opened and subsequent rejection of the request by SEC Chairman Frank was followed by the filing of criminal charges yesterday by the Justice Department.

Navy Decorates City of Flint's Capt. Gainard

Capt. Joseph Gainard, skipper of the adventure ship, City of Flint, was awarded the Navy Cross yesterday for "skill, fine judgment and devotion to duty."

Capt. Gainard

A naval reserve officer, who was on the torpedoed Lincoln in the World War and who put down a mutiny on the S. S. Algic three years ago, Capt. Gainard was in command of the Flint when she was captured last fall by the German pocket battleship, Deutschland. After many adventures, Gainard got away from the Germans in Norway and brought his freighter home.

Secretary of the Navy Knox announced award of the Navy Cross to Gainard in a letter to Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, of Massachusetts, who had proposed legislation for the decoration.

U. S. Jury Probes Defense Sabotage

Industries' Alleged Pacts With Nazis Under Investigation

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Ten major industries producing war materials—with the possibility that another 10 may become involved—were targets today of a Federal Grand Jury investigation seeking to determine whether alleged agreements between them and Nazi firms were interfering with National defense.

Assistant Attorney General Samuel Isseks disclosed the inquiry was begun July 11. Testimony of metallurgists and industrialists from all parts of the country already has been taken, he added.

Isseks, directing the inquiry here, declined to name the companies, but said he had been authorized to search into the production of industries whose output is necessary to the rearming of the United States, either directly or indirectly.

The Sherman antitrust act, it was learned, is being used in the move against an alleged national price control combine on vital war materials, purportedly raising defense costs to figures believed by the Government to be exorbitant.

These industries were said to be chiefly machine tools, electrical supplies, glass, chemicals, metal and alloy products essential to airplane production, foundry supplies, pneumatic and electrical pumps and road building supplies.

One commodity involved is a magnesium alloy used in making German planes, it was said. The alloy is lighter than aluminum, nearly twice as adaptable to machine uses and is understood to have enabled the Germans to reduce the weight of their planes 20 percent.

Patent exchange agreements between at least three United States firms and German organizations—including the huge Krupp armament works at Essen, Germany, it was said—controlling the production of war supplies here also are being examined by the grand jury.

Recently the Sherman law was used to break up a monopoly maintained by pacts between the Bausch & Lomo Optical Co. of this country and Carl Zeiss, of Germany, in the production of military and naval precision instruments.

U. S. Cracks Down On Ford's Alleged Antiunion War

By the Associated Press

The Ford Motor Co., with branch plants in more than a dozen States, was ordered by the Labor Board yesterday to post notices to employes in all plants that it would refrain from discouraging unionism by "physical violence" or "espionage."

The order was based, the board said, on a finding that the company had engaged in a "war" against union organization in the Dallas, Tex., plant. This campaign, the board alleged, was "formulated, directed, approved and ratified" by the Ford "policy makers" in the Dearborn, Mich., main office.

The board charged that the company organized a "strong arm squad" which, witnesses at a board hearing asserted, beat up union members and organizers.

The squad, the board added, was made up of employes of "large stature and of unusual muscular development who had constituted the plant's champion tug-of-war team."

The board termed it "organized gangsterism" and said the squad was supplied with blackjacks, whips and lengths of hose.

It asserted that the reputed squad leader, "Fats" Perry, had testified that the squad was organized to "put the fear of God" in any union sympathizer or organizer.

Representative Randolph left Washington shortly after noon yesterday for his West Virginia district after a conference with Sumners, in which he assented to the judiciary chairman's request to have Randolph accompany him to the House Rules Committee on Tuesday when a special rule will be asked to obtain privileged consideration for the Sumners measure.

Previously, at the conclusion of a short meeting held by a special five-man Senate Judiciary subcommittee, Chairman King said that his group had decided to wait for a "go" signal from Sumners before taking up the companion bill sponsored in the Senate by King.

King said he would confer with Sumners and invite him to appear before the Senate subcommittee to suggest a course of action, if he desired. The former made it clear that wishes of the resolution's original sponsor, Sumners, would be satisfactory to the Senate subcommittee.

Favorable action by the House Rules Committee on the request to be made Tuesday for privileged consideration of the Sumners suffrage resolution was expected, in view of past declarations of Chairman Sabath, of Illinois, in support of national representation for the District.

Addressing the Junior Board of Commerce, Lesh argued that because a city is well governed is no excuse for denying it representation. If local conditions are good, they would be better with representation, he asserted.

He pointed out that only 15,000 local citizens declared they had a vote somewhere in 1930, while District citizens pay approximately $27,000,000 a year in Federal taxes. He viewed Washington as alone among all the world's capitals in its lack of representation.

Objective of national representation, as supported by the Junior Board, means representation in the Senate and House and in the electoral college, Lesh explained. He expressed hope that the national organization will launch educational campaigns throughout the country to focus attention on the District's plight.

Norse Shipping Now Operating From America

Head of Parliament, Carl Hambro, Visits House Committee

Norway's vast merchant marine—which with its 4,800,000 tons was fourth largest in the world before the war—is now being directed from the New World, Carl Joachim Hambro, president of the Norwegian Parliament, said yesterday.

After a visit to the House Foreign Affairs Committee, Hambro told reporters that Norwegian ships are under control of the Trade and Shipping Institute in Montreal, and still pay taxes to the exiled Norwegian government.

The head of Norway's refugee legislature indicated he had told the Foreign Affairs Committee that his government is constitutionally functioning even though it is located in London. The Norwegian constitution, he pointed out, expressly declares that in time of war the King may have to reside outside Norway. It also provides that Parliament cannot sit while the country is occupied by foreigners, he said.

Hambro, who was accompanied by the Norwegian Minister, Wilhelm Munthe de Morgenstierne, added that the Norwegians who are administering the nation's civil life at present are acting constitutionally and are in no sense disloyal to the exiled government. They constitute a "strictly administrative civilian organ," he said.

Declaring with a smile that the Norwegian government is far from destitute, Hambro observed that all the gold reserves of Norway—as well as its merchant marine—have escaped German domination. That's the reason, he explained, why his government can pay interest on its foreign loans.

Payment of debts is an old Norwegian custom, Hambro proudly observed.

Rabbis Tell Plan To Give Girls Religious Training

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Rabbinical Association of the Hebrew Theological College disclosed today that there had been a wide misinterpretation of its recently announced decision to initiate girls into the obligations of Jewish religious life.

Rabbi Uri Miller, of New Orleans, association vice president, said that inasmuch as, in the religious education of boys, the Bar Mitzvah "impresses the necessity of intensified religious education, the opinion was expressed that some technique ought to be created which would have a similar effect in the education of girls." He added: "The entire project is in the field of Jewish educational technique and not of synagogue ritual."

Knox Relaxes 40-Hour-Week Rule for Navy Yard Workers

Agreement Reached With Cooperation Of Hillman; Employes Will Receive Time and a Half Pay for Extra Service

By the Associated Press

Secretary Knox granted authority yesterday to all navy yards and stations to work employes in excess of 40 hours per week.

KNOX

Announcement said the authority had been granted in cooperation with Sidney Hillman, labor member of the National Defense Committee, with the understanding that workers would be paid time and a half for work in excess of 40 hours.

Officials said the order would lift a limitation on working hours which the Navy imposed after President Roosevelt had said he believed it was unnecessary to work more than 40 hours a week until more of the unemployed had been absorbed.

Secretary Morgenthau disclosed that British veterans of the "Flanders pocket" are helping adapt American military tanks to modern war developments.

He said that the first British expert here on a tank purchase mission was Brig. Gen. D. H. Pratt, who commanded a fleet of 200 tanks in northeastern France and Belgium before the Nazi war machine forced their bomb-ridden evacuation from Dunkerque.

Morgenthau explained that the British were trying to buy tanks here, but it was not feasible for manufacturers to build one type for the United States and another for the British. So the British decided to pool their experience with American designs so as to produce standardized types that both countries could use.

Antiespionage measures for the defense program are fine, but two guards outside the door of Treasury Secretary Morgenthau are unnecessary, the Secretary said yesterday.

Two guards had been posted at his door by Treasury police officials, but Morgenthau quickly objected and had them withdrawn.

Cleveland, Aug. 8 (AP).—A Nationwide drive for a 10 per cent slash in all local, State and non-defense Federal expenditures will be launched in New York September 12 by State tax control movements, Fred A. Eldean, executive director of the Tax Foundation of New York, announced here today.

"This is an essential preparedness measure," he said. "Economies effected by eliminating waste, inefficiency and non-essential expenditures can more than offset the new defense taxes citizens will be called upon to pay."

Kansas City, Aug. 8 (AP).—The Midwest defense conference defense funds is being expended in the industrial East will be placed before national Administration leaders and members of President Roosevelt's defense commission in Washington Monday.

The executive committee of the Midwest defence conference agreed today to send a delegation to the Nation's Capital to "fight for the economic life of this area."

Richard W. Robbins, of Belvidere, Kans., committee chairman, said men from at least five States would be in the delegation. It asked appointments with William S. Knudsen, chairman of the President's committee; the Secretary of War, the Secretary of the Navy and with the President, if possible.

Marble Cake, Iced Coffee Team Up Well

Cooking Expert Offers Recipes for Chocolate Angel Food Varieties

By Martha Ellyn
The Post Food Editor.

Even during hot-weather days there should be something "on tap" for friends or neighbors when they drop in. There's something about a porch that sends out a call for a plate of cake and an abundance of cool thirst quenchers.

Martha Ellyn

Layer and loaf cakes are particularly happy affinities with iced coffee. And there is something old-fashioned and neighborly about a chocolate marble cake, made according to the following rule:

Chocolate Marble Cake

Sift cake flour, measure to 2 cups. Add 2 teaspoons baking powder and ¼-teaspoon salt, and sift together 3 times. Cream 6 tablespoons butter thoroughly, add 1 cup sugar gradually, and then cream together until light and fluffy. Add the flour alternately with 1 cup milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add 1 teaspoon vanilla. Fold in 3 stiffly beaten egg whites quickly and thoroughly. To 1 square unsweetened melted chocolate, add 1 tablespoon sugar and 2 tablespoons hot water, stirring until blended. Then add ¼ teaspoon soda and stir until thickened; add to 1-3 of cake batter. Put batter by tablespoons into greased 8x8x2-inch pan, alternating mixtures. Bake in a moderate oven, 350 degrees for about 55 minutes or until done. Frost with favorite icing.

Those who prefer a yellow marble cake may use whole eggs separated, adding the yolks to the butter mixture. There is also a marble angel food cake that is a favorite with those who favor the sponge variety. Following is the recipe:

Marble Angel Food Cake

Sift cake flour once; measure to ⅞ cup. To 6 tablespoons flour, add 2 tablespoons cocoa and sift four times. Sift the remaining flour four times. Beat 1 cup egg whites and ¼ teaspoon salt with wire whisk. When foamy, add 1 teaspoon cream of tartar; continue beating until stiff enough to hold up in peaks but not dry. Fold in 1¼ cups sifted granulated sugar, 2 tablespoons at a time. Divide mixture into two parts. To one, fold in the flour and ½ teaspoon vanilla. To other, fold in cocoa mixture, then ½ teaspoon vanilla. Put by tablespoons into ungreased angel food pan, alternating white and dark mixtures. Bake in slow oven, 275 degrees for 30 minutes. Increase temperature to 325 degrees and bake for 30 minutes longer. Remove from oven, invert pan for 1 hour.

Iced coffee if it is to be full, rich-flavored, should be made by using 3 level tablespoons for each standard measuring cup of water. Pour fresh steaming hot brew over ice cubes. Iced coffee cubes may be used. If there is someone in the crowd who cannot drink coffee for fear of sleeplessness, it is a good idea to brew decaffeinated coffee. Decaffeinated coffee needs slightly longer brewing time to bring out its full, rich flavor and that, for iced beverages, coffee must be double strength. For a novelty use a cinnamon stick as a stirrer in each glass.

Summer's Fillip—Marble Cake, Iced Coffee

Appeasers to jaded hot-weather appetites, be it the tea hour or an after-supper snack when guests drop in, are delectable cakes and frosty beverages. The plate of tempting Chocolate Marble and Marble Angel Food Cake slices and the glasses of iced coffee (shown above) are happy affinities

Many Other Suggestions Given for Use Of Pioneer Foodstuff; Delicate Dishes Have Succeeded Sturdy Indian Ones

By The Post Food Editor

CORN DISHES have undergone many delightful changes since the first white men in America learned cooking methods from the Indians. Our pioneer mothers made succotash, hominy and Indian corn cakes. Spanish Cabbage Top-Stove Quickie

When cabbage joins forces with nippy tomato ketchup it proves itself worthy of consideration even for the vegetable role in a summer dinner party. It is also in the list of top-stove quickies. This zestful dish is known as Spanish Cabbage. The next time you are at market select a good firm head of cabbage with the idea of using it for this type of dish. Here is the recipe:

Complicated Version Of Croquet Called Scoup Is Suitable

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin

GAMBOLING on the green isn't just a matter of catching hands and playing "ring around the rosy." No, it takes a lot more than such simple poetic pleasures to keep blase moderns amused. Luckily, there are some grand solutions that explain what to do with afternoon company when it's too hot to let them get started on war discussions and political arguments.

A new game that's really a more complicated version of croquet is called scoup. This is not too strenuous, but it can demand considerable skill for those who want to play seriously. Other good games for the languid are shuffleboard, horseshoe pitching, the shipboard horse race game, darts and archery. For those who can take more virile sports, consider soft ball, paddle tennis, outdoor bowling, badminton or deck tennis.

Don't forget that there's still a pack of fun in potato races, peanut races, three-legged races and all the other old-fashioned games that don't need special equipment. Why we've seen solemn old businessmen doff their dignity for a good old-time game of marbles, while a contest of jacks or rope-skipping for the ladies created a riot at a recent sociable.

Part of the fun of outdoor entertaining is appropriate and easy-to-serve refreshments. Don't forget that a pitcher of ice cold lemonade is about the most refreshing thing you can serve on a summer's day, and don't forget the jar of homemade cookies. If you are more ambitious, how about roasting frankfurters or steaks and serving them with buns and a big pot of coffee. There are ever so many handy grills for outdoor cooking in case you don't have a built-in oven, and a big enamel coffee pot is the thing for serving coffee in wholesale quantities.

But if your concern is year-round play ideas instead of season notions, you will be interested in our bulletin, "Let's Play at Our House," which gives suggestions for making your home a rendezvous for the neighborhood. And that means a lot to the conscientious mother during the years when she has growing children that she would like to keep within earshot. This bulletin will be sent on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Beauty Secrets

By CAROLYN ABBOTT

Cosmetics for College

NOW is the time for college girls to look around for cosmetic bargains. Around the middle or later part of August, many of the summer kits will go on sale at reduced prices. The cases may not be quite as fashionable as the new fall ones, but the products will be of the same quality.

It is not advisable to stock up on summer rouges, face powder or lipsticks. For one thing, the skin tones now are probably dark and will not blend with pastel tones. Then, too, the makeup colors may not harmonize with the new autumn dress colors. However, such basic things as cleansing creams, dry skin creams, makeup bases, manicure implements, mascara, soaps sachets, and eau de colognes are good buys.

The college girl should shop around for a good hair brush. That is one item that she will need if she is to keep her hair in excellent condition. It might not be a bad idea to look around for permanent reductions. Many local salons give special prices on permanents during the summer.

While a few beauty aids are essential to the well groomed college girl, much of her beauty depends upon rest, sleep, proper diet, exercise and proper care of the skin. Every college girl should include a good complexion brush in her array of cosmetics. This brush should be used daily to scrub the face and to insure cleanliness.

Laurence Stallings Praises U. S. Fliers

Laurence Stallings, former Washington newspaperman who saw for himself what war is like and then told about it in his "What Price Glory," said here yesterday that the United States has the finest aviators now he ever saw fly a ship.

Merian C. Cooper, World War flyer, later of Lieut. Col. Kosciusko Squadron, Poland, and now associated with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer Studios, here with Stallings, agreed.

Coming from the West Coast, Stallings and Cooper said they had no business to attend to other than to learn, out of personal curiosity, what is going on in Washington. They said they had been out of contact and had seen little to comment on except the aviators.

"They're the finest I ever saw," Stallings said. "Anybody who monkeys with that crowd will certainly get his lower teeth jarred out."

He and Cooper are stopping at the Carlton Hotel.

District's Amateur Sailors Show No Fear of 'The Bounding Main'

Mr. and Mrs. Aldace Walker, Erstwhile Landlubbers, Take To the 'Sea' in Chesapeake Bay Where They Plan Series of Boat Parties; Frank Holcomb and Pals on Cruise

By Carolyn Bell

The town is teeming with amateur sailors. Celestial navigation and seamanship hold no terrors for them.

Mr. and Mrs. Aldace Walker, who heretofore preferred dry land, have suddenly taken to the sea—or at least Chesapeake Bay. Last year Mr. Walker purchased a handsome teakwood launch now moored at the Walker estate, Webley, on the Eastern Shore. The fact that the boat was minus a motor did not disturb Mr. Walker in the least. At present he is installing two Packard motors in his latest acquisition.

Series of Boat Parties Planned

In September the Walkers hope to have a series of boat parties. They plan to gather a group of 20 or so at Annapolis, deposit them on the boat and ferry them across to Webley, which is opposite Annapolis. For the present the launch is nameless, but Mrs. "Chip" Robert, Mr. Walker's sister, who says she will probably have to name it anyhow, has suggested "J. Cricket"—which may or may not stick.

Old hands at this cruising game are the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. Thomas Holcomb who have scarcely let a week-end go by without boarding the Slowboat. Their pride and joy is anchored at Coon Creek, also on the Eastern Shore. If the weather is nice they plan a short jaunt this week-end.

Frank Holcomb, Pals on Cruise

Following in the wake of his father is young Frank Holcomb who, since last June, has been busy with the sails of Moondance, his trim boat. From time to time Frank has had various lads aboard with him. At the moment he is accompanied by Thomas Tighe and Brook Armat, both of this city. The boys put in at Newcastle, Del., several days ago, where they are visiting Frank's aunt, Miss Reba Holcomb. Miss Holcomb was down here last week-end, cruising with Gen. and Mrs. Holcomb. When Frank left in June he headed for Newport where several days of mean weather slowed them down. Accompanying him as far as Long Island was Bruce Weissenbacher. At New London, Mr. Holcomb picked up Steven Rowan, who went as far as Newport aboard the Moondance.

Tied up at the Capital Yacht Club is Colleen, a swank 95-foot power launch owned by Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Wallace. The Wallaces are novices at the sailing game—but after a short trip aboard their new possession are convinced there is nothing to compare with it. They came down from New York to Cape May. From there they took the inland route to Colonial Beach and steamed home from there. Now they plan to do a good deal of "dock-yachting" aboard the Colleen.

Mr. and Mrs. John Paul Gensemer, who have been living aboard the Tech this summer, are washing down decks, so to speak, to leave for a trip to Norfolk very soon. Aside from cramming on navigation, they are busy getting up an amateur crew of sailors for the trip.

Sea Fox Moored At Yacht Club

For the most part of the summer, the Sea Fox, Miss Charlotte Noland's famed boat, has been moored at the Capital Yacht Club. The Sea Fox, which is a luxurious motor yacht, is well known on the northern part of the Eastern coast, where Miss Noland sails it every summer. During the early part of the summer a steady stream of Foxcroft girls took the boat of their headmistress on short jaunts down the river.

CAPITAL WHIRL

By SALLY SWIFT

IN REHOBOTH, when one sees a lady sporting bruises and contusions on the beach, one naturally blames it on the surf, especially since the sea has been rather rough these last days. Therefore I was surprised when I asked Mrs. J. P. Jackson how she collected her rainbow bruises to hear that a fall from her horse was responsible.

It seems that Mrs. Jackson, who is a keen and skillful horsewoman, has bought a 3-year-old colt by Man-o'-War. She has been working hard breaking the colt and enjoys the job, but occasionally she and the animal have different ideas about what comes next on their program of exercise. For instance, the colt will sometimes stop suddenly in the middle of a fast trot and thoughtfully scratch his ear with a hind hoof. He accomplished this maneuver the other day to his own undoing, as well as that of his owner, and the two of them went down together.

Result is that Mrs. Jackson is happy to have a vacation at the sea, where the surf, no matter how rough, seems mild and gentle by comparison. She and Capt. Jackson are installed at the Corner Cupboard at Rehoboth and expect to remain there most of August.

ONE OF WASHINGTON'S charmers, Peggy Townsend, has been visiting Mrs. Belle Deutschbein and Miss Helen Hume at their attractive cottage at Rehoboth. The cottage, a log cabin in the pines, has a big two-story living room with an open fireplace and is just the spot for a restful vacation.

Peggy spent her days at Rehoboth quietly, and concentrated on acquiring a tan in preparation for her departure for Newport today. After ten days at the Rhode Island resort she will return to Washington and then be off again to Virginia Beach.

Miss Hume will return to Washington this coming Monday while Mrs. Deutschbein will remain at Rehoboth till the middle of the month. Two cavaliers from Washington who escorted these ladies about Rehoboth recently were Alden Briggs and Johnny Gallihar.

THE REV. and Mrs. Hatch Dent Sterrett are visiting relatives at Frankfort, Del., and came over to Rehoboth the other day for a game of golf and to lunch at Evergreens-by-the-Sea. Young Sammie Sterrett, who will graduate from St. Alban's School next year, remained in Washington where he is busily working to brush up his French this summer. Toward the end of August Sammie will take a trip to the Adirondacks with his father.

And, speaking of St. Alban's School, one of the snappiest-looking members of the Nine-O'Clock Club at the Rehoboth-Indian Beach Club is George Goodrich in his smart St. Alban's blazer with the school shield on it. George, who is a son of Judge and Mrs. Edgar Goodrich, is improving the shining vacation hours by caring for beach umbrellas, taking them to and from the beach in the blue and white family jalopy of the Goodriches.

I WAS intrigued the other day to read in a local paper, publishing signed pieces by a New York society writer, that the baby of Mrs. Vadim Makaroff, the former Lysette Harding, of Washington, was suspected by Long Island police of misplacing her mother's pearl necklace while using it for a teething ring. The fact is that Mrs. Makaroff has only one child and he is, or was until recently, driving an ambulance in France. He is Freddie Prince, jr., who went to France along with King Stone, son of Mrs. Sterling Larrabee, of Warrenton, back in the spring. Freddie doesn't cut his teeth on pearl necklaces but rather cuts his mental wisdom teeth on an airplane, gift of his father, in which he swoops around Long Island when he is at home.

The baby in the necklace story was really Mrs. Makaroff's 3-year-old niece, Elizabeth Allen, who, with her mother, Mrs. Julian Allen, recently arrived from France fleeing the war.

Mrs. Marquis James has gone to New York from Rehoboth. She will give a radio broadcast tomorrow night of a play written by herself. Being beautiful and blonde and the wife of a famous author should be enough for any one woman but she had to be talented herself in her own right. It doesn't seem fair.

Today's Social Notes

(From the Truthtown Torch)

Politics has become the vogue of the hour among Truthtown socialites, many of whom are heroically cutting their vacations short to work in the political parties.

Mrs. Quincy C. K. Maxmillian 3d is giving two hours a week to serving as hostess at a party headquarters. Mrs. Ignatius Squabb has returned posthaste from Clamport to serve as supervisor of campaign buttons, and Mrs. John John has been appointed chairman of a committee to mobilize glamour debs to distribute campaign literature in costume at polo matches, horse shows, summer operas, etc.

Mrs. Parmalee Van Tinsel is busy composing campaign ditties and Mrs. DeLancey Duffer is organizing a political pageant in which she will play the lead, and which she hopes to take later on a road tour to round up rural votes.

A Glittering Affair

Stunning gowns and jewels were in evidence at the benefit roof dance given last night to raise a food fund for war sufferers. Mrs. Buffington Birdhaven wore her famous diamond and ruby bowknot, Mrs. Mike McPace displayed her diamond tiara and shower pin, and Mrs. Nicodemus Lusch wore her collar clips of sapphires wreathed in diamonds. Miss Daphne Beeswax, glamour deb, wore her wide diamond twin bracelets and the Marquesa Avocado, who recently arrived by clipper from Lisbon, wore her famous diamond and emerald dog collar.

Quotations

MRS. CASIMER CHIVES—"Truthtown is really not so bad in summer—if you have air conditioning."

MRS. LUCIUS GILDERLYLY—"I am leaving at once for a dude ranch to get toughened up for whatever may happen."

MRS. ATWOOD SINBAD-SMYTHE—"This is the first summer I have spent in the States and it is really not half as bad as I expected."

J. HOLLINGSWORTH DRIPP—"Everybody is so confused."

MRS. BADGERTON BELLWETHER—"America must be awakened!"

Mrs. Beetle's Enterprise

Another bombshell has been thrown into the quiet of Truthtown summer social life by Mrs. Bartholomew Beetle, the town's wealthy and eccentric dowager.

Mrs. Beetle has announced she will organize a new and "very exclusive" patriotic society composed of the descendants of indentured slaves of Colonial days.

"I have just discovered," said Mrs. Beetle, "that I had an ancestor in the Virginia colonies who was an indentured slave. Now I am sure nearly every old-line American has at least one such ancestor, and since it has become so common to have ancestors who are lords, colonial governors and such, I think it would be very interesting to have an organization of descendants of indentured slaves.

"In fact," said Mrs. Beetle, "I intend to do a lot of genealogical research this summer and see if I cannot dig up enough indentured slave descendants among my friends to for ma society this fall. At a time like this I think such a movement would be a real service to democracy."

Long Waistline for Fall Calls for New Corseting

The correct girdle for the smart fall figure is worn (illustrated above) by Actress Ida Lupino who affects a low-waisted black crepe cut along long-hipped lines

Mainbocher, Famous Designer, Evolves Streamlined Girdles Which Achieve Unboned Sleekness for New Silhouette

By Marshall Adams

The Post Fashion Editor.

HAS the report that we're due for a longer waistline and lower hipline put you to rolling and exercising in the aisles?. Does it bring up visions of skintight girdles that try to combat lolling hips through sheer bone and lacing power?

MARSHALL ADAMS

If so, try to forget it, for the high and mighty Mainbocher has spoken, and being one of the most reliable arbiters of both the American dress and corset silhouette, his word can be taken as law. Mainbocher, originator of last year's "wasp-waisted look" and "waltz-waisted" corset, is in a position to speak, since for years he has dressed such cosmopolites as the Duchess of Windsor and Lady Mendl in his Paris establishment. He has had a special understanding of the needs of Americans—being one himself by birth and tastes.

Graceful Long Hipline

Working with Alice Cromwell and John Field, widely known names in the undergarment world, Mainbocher created an entire collection of fall clothes especially for the prescribed fall figure. The coutourier, now in this country, describes the perfect 1940 figure as having "a long-tailored waistline extending well down to the hipbone, from there down to a graceful hipline, with bust naturally high." And Mainbocher adds that this silhouette will be gained without lacings or bones—glad news for those who don't like cramped figure positions even for the sake of dear old fashion.

The way to achieve this miraculous unboned sleekness is by means of the thinner new materials which have greater tensile strength than ever before. Both two-way and one-way stretch lastex fabrics have been ingeniously used, minus the trickery of polka-dotted satin which Mainbocher employed last spring when he created a "really different corset" for the American figure. Instead of dots, attention has been given to practical things like strong elastic batistes, laces, nets and special corset webs for curve-control.

No Problem Clothes

The gowns designed by Mainbocher to emphasize the long-waisted fall figure are, fortunately, not problem clothes. They are lady-like clothes which solve figure problems rather than make demands on the wearer. They are in deep nut brown, violet and black, mostly in mossy crepe and velvet. Blessedly they show no gadget trims. Rather they are characterized by simplicity, fine fabric and detailing which fit into these troubled times. They are not clothes to make the wearer conspicuous and, as Mainbocher himself says, "They will not be out of place—whatever the front page news reads."

Exercise Now for Fall Trimness Demanded by New Fashions

By Ida Jean Kain

SUMMER is the careless season . . . the hair has a way of getting blowsy, the skin looks weather-beaten, and the waistline slips its moorings. And the fall styles, so help us, will feature the waistline right where nature intended it to be!

That's the cue to start now to get yours down where it belongs. If you are in doubt that waist makes haste, just check that measurement against what it was last spring. Hah! You thought it would be as neat and tidy as ever—but more likely there's some over-lap!

Your muscles lose their snap fast in the summer. The mid-section muscles that should be strong and firm go soft and bulgy—you can't possibly look trim this fall unless you do some trimming. Here is a trio of exercises that will help you to do it. Take them in the cool of the morning and get them over with.

It's the Stretch That Counts

1. POSITION: Double your skip rope, or take a wand, and hold it high overhead with hands wide apart and the arms straight. Stand stretched tall, feet together.

MOVEMENT: Holding the arms straight, bend acutely to the left, getting a thorough stretch all along the right side. Stand erect, stretch tall, then bend acutely to the right. The important things to be remembered in this exercise are to concentrate the stretch between the ribs and hips, and to pull up with the lower abdominal muscles as you bend. Do the exercise slowly and accurately, repeating five times for each side.

2. POSITION: Stand erect, with arms down at sides, feet together.

Simpler Than It Sounds

MOVEMENT: Flex the right knee, bringing it high up toward the chest. At the same time, fling the left arm straight up in front, the right arm straight out in back, both about shoulder level. Return to position and continue, flexing the knee and swinging the arms rhythmically. Alternate the knee and arm action, continuing for 12 counts. Be sure to pull up constantly with the lower abdominal muscles and keep chest and head lifted.

3. POSITION: Lie on the back on the floor with the hands clasped back of the head and the elbows straight down and hold them together throughout the exercise.

MOVEMENT: Keeping the elbows and the upper shoulders flat on the floor, flex the knees, rolling the hips over to the left and pointing the knees downward, hard! Draw the knees up, roll over to the right, and point knees down, hard. It is essential that the elbows and shoulders be kept on the floor all the time. Otherwise, you lose part of the twist and stretch at the waist. This exercise may seem somewhat involved when you first try it, but actually it is simple—and extremely effective.

Mary Haworth's Mail

'Miss Modern' Is Told That Home-Keeping Women Who Can't Hold Their Husbands Are Not Always As Dim-Witted as 'the Other Woman' May Think

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: The letter from "Miss Modern," which you published August 3, was of special interest to me, because ten years ago I was a "Miss Modern" myself and dominated by the same arrogant intention to make my life a full one, regardless of those who would be injured by my plans.

The major dissimilarity is that the man I planned to marry (when he had discarded his wife), was not my employer. But he was already married and he had three children. I believed, as does your correspondent, that his wife was a good homemaker and mother, but incapable of "holding her husband" because (I thought) of certain feminine shortcomings, or lack of various wiles and charms, which I was sure I possessed.

The ensuing ten years have seen some interesting developments. The wife—old fashioned, etc., as I had thought her to be—agreed with me that since the law sanctions divorce and remarriage, there was nothing "technically wrong" with what I was doing, and she took advantage (with a vengeance) of all the advantages the law afforded her.

She employed the finest counsel and obtained a divorce decree which tied her husband to a generous alimony arrangement that promises to last forever—as far as I can see. She has reared her children (the youngest was 16 at the time of the divorce) so that they are brilliantly educated and my husband is exceedingly proud of them. And, also, hurt that they do not respect him—which makes me anything but happy in that regard.

In addition, she has created a very useful position for herself, in which she has won much attention and respect, and when the newspapers print stories about herself and her work—which is not infrequently—my husband reads them avidly and with obvious pride. He has even been known to refer to her as, "my wife."

Although she is now 52, this former wife is handsome and admired. A man of excellent background and considerable means attends her everywhere and she could marry him, if she would. You might think that her vindictiveness in making my husband continue the punitive alimony payments would make him hate her. But oddly enough, it makes him smile. He seems to admire her for it. The children have been well educated because of it—but educated to a degree which my husband could not actually afford. And the courts can see no release for him from the alimony arrangement. She has proved that she was not the dumb domesticated creature I had thought her, and I was too ignorant to realize the terrible hold on my life that this financial contract gave her.

My life with my husband has been ruined. He hasn't made as much money during the past 10 years as he did before, and I know that he feels I am partly to blame. He is no longer attractive to me; nor I to him. We know it; and I also know that in his heart he regrets having broken up his former home. His wife did all she could to stop us. That is, she tried to make him see things from her angle; and then kept us waiting and waiting, until finally we did take steps to force the break.

This, it seems, is what she cannot forgive. Her husband sued her for divorce, making accusations for the purpose of forcing her to file a counter charge. This she did, after fighting his suit and making him admit his charges were false. This should have satisfied her, since the publicity injured him in a business way. But no. She is determined to punish us forever.

So I would advise your 1940 "Miss Modern" to watch her step and to realize (1) that some seemingly old-fashioned wives are ruthlessly determined, and (2) that some husbands leave their wives because they are weak and characterless and not because they are so deeply in love with the woman of their second choice. At this stage in my own experience, I would say—if anybody asked me—that if it's happiness you're looking for, the best bet is to let married men alone. Too many troublesome complications come with them, and they are not worth the bitterness and sorrow they are likely to bring.

MRS. MODERN.

Story Misses Fire, From Woman's Angle

DEAR MRS. MODERN: Do you know what I think? I think that if this is, indeed, a picture drawn from life, it is much more likely that the letter comes from the wife who was displaced, rather than from the woman who replaced her. Why do I think so? Because (from a woman's angle) the narrative just doesn't hold together. It doesn't make sense, for the reason that it just isn't feminine nature for a woman whose emotions are involved to be intellectually so honest, so objective, so detached, in appraising the performance of a female adversary who had bested her in a game of wits.

I should surmise, therefore, that if there is foundation in fact for this moral tale—the story is told by Wife No. 1 from what she conceives to be (or revengefully hopes is) the viewpoint of Wife No. 2. But that, of course, doesn't lessen the biting significance of your preachment, to-wit: (1) that already-married men are a dubious investment, as a general rule, so far as a husband-hunting woman's chances of happiness are concerned; (2) that (as you say) too many troublesome complications are apt to come with them, and (3) that they are seldom worth the vexatious compromises that a blood-sucking first wife may make necessary.

Corsetieres To Concentrate On College Girls

New York (AP).—The corsetless college girl is the object of much concern to corsetieres. The idea seems to be that if you can get a girl into a corset while she's still young and slim she'll be a confirmed corset wearer by the time she's plump enough to need more expensive all-in-ones.

Manufacturers will launch campaigns this fall to tell college girls why they think they should wear corsets. A survey of three colleges, conducted by the trade paper, Women's Wear, shows that 50 per cent of the girls wear some sort of girdle most of the time, and 25 per cent more wear them for dress-up occasions. That, corsetieres think, isn't enough. They want college girls, as well as their elders, to own a whole wardrobe of corsets—at least two pantie girdles for sports, two regulation girdles for classroom wear, and an all-in-one for tailored suits and evening dresses. Above all, they want to bring the rebellious 25 per cent who never wear corsets into the fold.

A WOMAN'S

A Woman's Washington

By JEAN BROWNELL

LILLIAN CAIN, dental hygienist, spends her days teaching people how to keep their teeth by keeping them clean. Talk to her for half an hour, and you'll feel like dashing right home to prevent a little decay. Her punch line usually is: "You wash your dishes every time you use them, don't you? Yet your dishes won't decay and your teeth will."

Lillian Cain

She prefers a small circular toothbrush to the more familiar rectangular type. It has an angle in the handle and can get behind the back teeth without producing the click which, she says, annoys some people so much that they don't brush their teeth thoroughly. Demonstrating with a model jaw, she tells the patient to press the side of the brush against the gum and "shimmy" the ends against and between the teeth. This motion massages the gum and polishes the teeth at the same time.

There are 54 women working as dental hygienists in Washington, she says. Six are in the schools; the others work in dentists' offices and hospitals. She herself was for seven years supervisor of the dental hygiene department at Georgetown University, the only woman on the dental school faculty. When she left three years ago, the job was abolished.

HEADLINE HIGH SPOTS—"You Can Make Slip Covers If You Learn How" . . . Drama Dept.—"Miss Crawford is not as thin as when she appeared in 'The Little Women.'" . . . Etiquette news—"In a restaurant with table cloths, a tip should never be less than 25 cents." . . . Fashion flash—"Bathing suits are not always synonymous with the ocean."

High spot of the current Crossroads Theater show, "Fallen Angels," is a cat fight between Catharine Ryan and Elizabeth Winburn, who play the principal roles in the piece. The squabble arises over the man in their lives, plus a good deal too much property champagne. A backstage angle to the situation is that during rehearsals both Catharine and Elizabeth succumbed to an attack of temperament, and their real-life squabbles threatened to spoil the show. Two days before dress rehearsal, both realized they were being silly. So they put a reverse English on their "Fallen Angels" scenes, they got together over a good deal of real champagne. By the time they paid the $11 bar check, they had settled their differences and were ready to return to their stage battle with no animosity whatsoever.

Favorite seat of Gen. Peyton March, World War chief of staff, when he goes to the ball game is directly beneath the press box in the upper stands at Griffith Stadium. But on ladies' day the general may be seen gloomily tugging his goatee 'way over in left-field.

DOOR-TO-DOOR—A minor racket is developing in Georgetown thanks to the ingenuity of a small colored girl whom we shall call Elsie. Whenever Elsie gets low in funds, she takes pencil and paper and writes out tickets of admission to a mythical play or operetta allegedly being staged at a nearby church. These she peddles from door to door at a profit of approximately 100 per cent.

The scheme was uncovered by some of her more legitimate competitors. "Everywhere we go, people say Elsie's been here already," they complain.

D. C. Legion Auxiliary Warned of 5th Column

U. S. Needs People She Can Trust, Says Mrs. Gilbert

"The United States needs pepole she can trust," declared Mrs. Helen Lee Gilbert, national vice president for the eastern division of the American Legion Auxiliary, last night as she warned of the Fifth Column menace in a talk before the District of Columbia Department of the auxiliary.

The local auxiliary which opened its fifteenth annual convention at the Mayflower Hotel heard Mrs. Gilbert call for national unity to protect this country from the fate which befell another republic—France.

Another speaker was Col. Julius I. Peyser, past department commander of the District Legion, who reiterated the legion's support of the national defense program. "No one interested in the legion," he said, "will shirk this duty to his country."

Mrs. Mary B. McMillen, department president of the auxiliary, presided over last night's banquet, which was a prelude to the convention business which gets under way tonight at 7:30 o'clock. Mrs. Gilbert will again be a principal speaker today when she discusses "Our Responsibility to Our Country." John Blane Fitzgerald, national vice commander of the American Legion, will speak on "National Defense and Americanism." The meeting will be held in the Commerce Department auditorium.

Speaking briefly at the banquet was Department Commander William H. Hargraves, who pledged the department's readiness to cooperate in every way with the national defense program.

Toastmaster Joseph J. Malloy, national executive committeeman for the District Department of the Legion, introduced, among other guests, Thomas Owens, national historian for the Legion, and Ben Aronsohn, commander of the Jewish War Veterans, Post 58.

Mrs. McMillen introduced Mrs. Fannie Meeks, president of the Gold Star Mothers of Washington; Mrs. Jennie Dismond, national vice president of the Jewish War Veterans Auxiliary, and a number of other women leaders of veterans auxiliaries.

Mrs. Della Rocca was in charge of the banquet.

Capt. Rhoda Milliken, commanding officer of the Police Department Women's Bureau, will address the auxiliary's junior conference tomorrow morning. A luncheon will follow in the Washington Hotel tomorrow honoring past department heads. Officers will be elected later in the afternoon with installation preceded by a flag ceremony tomorrow evening.

Three Burglars Caught Looting Home as Occupant Gives Alarm

Sleeper Awakens, Slips Away in Bare Feet to Phone Police

Summoned by an awakened sleeper, who sneaked out of his home to a neighbor's telephone, police last night seized three burglars as they were looting a well-to-do Sixteenth street northwest residence.

Harold Park, 25, of 6326 Sixteenth street, went to bed early last night to cure a cold. At about 9 p. m., he awoke and heard voices downstairs. Thinking it was his younger brother, he turned over and went back to sleep.

A few minutes later he awoke again. The voices were in the next room. Realizing something was amiss, Park slid quietly out of bed.

"I stood in my closet for a few minutes, not knowing what to do. I had no gun, and there was nothing around to make a suitable club."

He put on his bathrobe, grabbed his billfold and descended the stairs noiselessly.

"In the kitchen," he said, "I grabbed a gingerale bottle and started back. When I reached the stairs I saw a third man in the living room, peering out through the curtains."

He then turned back, raced out of the kitchen door and ran across a lot in his bare feet to the home of R. M. Hodgson, a bank examiner, who lives at 6314 Sixteenth street. Before he could get out of Hodgson's house, police were at the scene.

Privates Wilbur L. Sherer, C. F. Bradley, L. D. Peyton and P. G. Dawson surrounded the house and entered back and front entrances simultaneously. The robbers took cover—one under a dining room table, another in a second floor closet, the third in a corner of the living room.

HAROLD PARK
He Called Police

It took the policemen about 20 minutes to round them all up. Then they told police that they entered by breaking a kitchen window. Clothes, a dime bank and jewelry valued at $200 were found packed in a Gladstone bag.

Police said all the men had prison records. One was released from the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga., three months ago while another left Lorton Reformatory a short while ago. All were Washington born.

Park, the son of William A. Park, a transfer company operator, is employed in his father's concern.

After the tournament, a chicken and ham supper will be served by the Grange Ladies' Auxiliary.

Chairman in charge of the afternoon events will be Daniel L. Snyder, Burtonsville. Other committee heads include Mrs. Henry S. Lank, supper; Mrs. Nellie Marlowe, bingo; Pearl E. Marlowe, dancing, and Walter Wright, ice cream.

Chief Marshal Snowden J. Athey will charge the knights. Judges will be George P. Sellers, William Flaster and Benjamin Brashears.

Electrocution Ends Areaway Romance Begun 5 Months Ago

Tragedy Dashes Wedding Plans Of Bride-to-Be

A tiny areaway on Sixteenth street northwest that glowed for five months with the warmth of human love, last night was a cold and desolate box of wood and stone.

Over the narrow space, from the kitchen window at 1912 to the sleeping porch at 1910 Sixteenth street, Henry Lemmond and Ruth Girard struck up an acquaintanceship which they vowed would be ended only by death. Last night Lemmond's body was shipped to his birthplace in Charlotte, N. C., for burial.

The 28-year-old sheet metal worker was electrocuted by a bare wire Wednesday while working on the New Railroad Retirement Board Building.

"We were going to be married October 30, my birthday," Miss Girard said.

"He was sitting in his kitchen one day five months ago, and I was on my porch. We looked at each other and smiled, then said 'hello.'"

Introductions followed, then five months of friendship and romance.

"Each morning," she said, "he would lean across the areaway and wake me up. He did that Wednesday. 'I'll see you tonight,' he said.

"At 4 o'clock I waited for him, as I did every day, on the corner of Twelfth and G, a block from my office in the Agriculture Department. I waited 'til 5, but he didn't come. When I got home, his landlady told me. He had died at 3."

A leave clerk in the Farm Security Administration, Miss Girard, who is 23, came here a year and a half ago from her home in New York State.

RUTH GIRARD

"We liked the outdoors," she said, "both of us. And we had wonderful times. For two months we spent every week-end at the beach, swimming, loafing on the sand, sunning ourselves, talking. In the evenings sometimes we would go to the Open Air Theater. Now it's all over."

What will she do?

"I'll keep working here," she said. "Next month our agency moves to Philadelphia. That will be better.

"But I've already moved out of my room. I could never bear to go back to that porch and look across that empty space into an empty kitchen."

Snatcher Snared Snatching Wrong Car

A 25-year-old "snatcher" for a finance company yesterday "snatched" a car by mistake and the district attorney's office said he could be held for taking property without right.

No charge was immediately placed, however. John S. Miller, 25, a former policeman, of 1372 North Carolina avenue northeast, parked his car at Eleventh and R streets and a moment later noticed a man trying to drive it away. He called Policeman A. K. Bowens. It developed that the man was employed by a finance company but he'd taken the wrong car.

Sears, Roebuck Seeks to Build $750,000 Store

Permit Asked for New Building In Tenleytown

An application to erect a $750,000 department store in Tenleytown was filed yesterday by Sears, Roebuck & Co., which operates four other stores in metropolitan Washington.

The action follows by several months unsuccessful efforts on the part of the Friendship Citizens Association and other organizations to block the construction through the District Zoning Commission.

The construction application, filed in the District Building, calls for erection of a one-story reinforced concrete structure at 4277 Albemarle, street northwest, with a frontage of 395 feet and an average depth of 352 feet. The application lists John Stokes Redden, of Chicago, as the architect.

Controversy over the proposed building arose last February after the Zoning Commission had reclassified from commercial to residential a lot bounded by Albemarle street, Wisconsin avenue, River road and Murdock Mill road. This lot the merchandising concern wished to use, together with an adjacent piece of land already in a commercial zone, for the new store.

The Friendship Citizens Association, which draws its members from that area, at first approved the proposal, but several weeks later, on February 20, the association reversed its stand after it was argued that the store would increase traffic in an already heavily traveled section, thus adding to the traffic hazards of 3,000 pupils who attend the nearby Janney, Alice Deal, Woodrow Wilson, Immaculata Seminary, Dumblaine and St. Ann's schools.

According to the zoning commission, the building plans provide for roof parking of 280 cars, with four ramps for entrance and exit.

When some 350 residents of the area petitioned the zoning commission for a rehearing, it was refused on the ground that neighborhood sentiment is not a controlling factor in zoning cases.

In rejecting the rehearing, the zoning board declared that any one or any group believing that the commission acted arbitrarily has access to the courts.

Davis Says Succor To Europe Depends On Belligerents

New York, Aug. 8.—Relief activities of the American Red Cross on continental Europe for the remainder of the summer and next winter depend on the British and German governments, Norman H. Davis, national chairman of the Red Cross, said today at his summer home in Stockbridge, Mass.

"It's all a question of how far humanitarian considerations can be carried without conflicting with military necessity," Davis said. "We have to be practical."

Davis emphasized that the Red Cross' fundamental policy remained unaltered. The organization would continue to extend all possible aid, he said, only on the condition that it had liberty of action to make sure that relief went solely to the actual victims.

Sen. Truman Leads Primary by 6,456

St. Louis, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—U. S. Senator Harry S. Truman tonight held a lead of 6,456 votes over Gov. Lloyd C. Stark in their contest for the Democratic nomination for U. S. Senator as belated returns from Tuesday's primary were compiled.

With only 76 rural precincts still unreported, Truman had 263,854 votes, Stark 256,398 and former U. S. District Attorney Maurice M. Milligan, 127,497. In addition to the unreported precincts about 5,000 absentee ballots remain to be counted.

WPA's Simple Fare Becomes A Feast for Underfed Children

Officials Attend First Formal Meal At Snow's Court; Similar Report to Be Served Daily Through Lunch Project

Thirty-nine colored children folded their hands and bowed in prayer, then replacing the solemnity with smiles, started to eat.

Nothing unusual in children eating, of course, except that these kids were underfed, and such simple food as bread and butter, tomato and prunes, were in the nature of a feast.

What is more, they'll get a similar lunch every day now through the WPA School Lunch Project here.

Scene of yesterday's repast was Snow's Court, where 150 colored families live, between Twenty-fourth, Twenty-fifth, I and K streets northwest. Attending the formal first meal were a number of WPA officials, including District Administrator Paul Edward and Mrs. Florence Kerr, Assistant WPA Commissioner, and E. F. Harris, president of the Lincoln Civic Association, which has been seeking to improve conditions in the alley community.

Improvement of Snow's Court was begun last month when a WPA supervisor was assigned to develop recreational facilities. Twenty-two truckloads of trash were removed, and now cleaning up is part of daily routine. Recreational equipment was supplied through the Playground and Community Center Department. And now the WPA, through the lunch project which serves 5,000 lunches daily to Washington school and playground children, is doing its share in brightening up life for the youngsters in the off-street dwelling area.

Veterans Convene At Bluefield

Bluefield, W. Va., Aug. 8 (AP).—Twenty-one years after the A. E. F.'s Eightieth Division helped make it "all over, over there," the veterans of the World War opened tonight a convention which three Governors may attend.

As the gavel dropped for the first session, General Chairman H. R. Connell, of Bluefield, counted a registration of approximately 600 from the two Virginias and Pennsylvania.

National Commander Edwin Dobson, of Pittsburgh, appeared before the veterans, responding to addresses of welcome by the Mayors of Bluefield, W. Va., and Bluefield, Va.

Two thousand veterans and guests are expected for the four-day meeting.

Hope Dims For Kennedy Bill Passage

D. C. Reorganization Measure's Chances Appear Slim After Capitol Parley

Chances of the Kennedy bill on reorganization of the District government being called up in the House Monday, the next District day, dimmed yesterday following a conference between Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee and Majority Leader Rayburn.

While both Randolph and Rayburn declined to discuss the substance of their remarks, it was inferred they are dubious that the Administration's objections to the bill have been removed by the Budget Bureau's action Wednesday in giving the District Commissioners more control over municipal finances.

City Management Proposed

From other sources on Capitol Hill it was learned that, besides, there is another obstacle: The feeling that a piece of legislation as controversial as the reorganization bill should not be pushed while House and Senate leaders are attempting to expedite action on the Sumners resolution providing for a constitutional amendment on national representation for the District.

The Kennedy bill, which has been on the House calendar for several weeks, would completely divorce the Budget Bureau from control over municipal funds and set up a city manager form of local government.

Kennedy In Baltimore

Hope that Randolph would call his measure up in the House on Monday was expressed Wednesday by Representative Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland, following the Budget Bureau's announcement it would discontinue detailed consideration of the District budget, giving the Commissioners greater control.

Kennedy, who will not return to Congress next year as he was defeated in the May primary, was in Baltimore yesterday and unavailable for comment on reports that his measure probably will remain on the shelf, the budget reform notwithstanding.

Those Syracusan Kids Cut Some Crazy Capers

'Boys From Syracuse' Opens at Keith's With 'Spoils of Conquest' Adding Ominous Note to Otherwise Goofy Entertainment

"THE BOYS FROM SYRACUSE." Universal picturization of the George Abbott musical comedy, with music and lyrics by Rodgers and Hart, adapted to the screen by Leonard Spigelglass, Chas. Grayson and P. Gerard Smith, featuring Allan Jones, Martha Raye and Joe Penner, with Rosemary Lane, Charles Butterworth, Irene Hervey, Alan Mowbray, Eric Blore and Samuel S. Hinds.. Directed by A. Edward Sutherland. At RKO-Keith's Theater.

VAGUELY BASED on Will Shakespeare's "A Comedy of Errors," with modern amplifications of which the Bard never dreamed, "The Boys From Syracuse" is right up the August alley of the escapists. To be sure, Ephesus has just blitzkrieged Syracuse and there are acute economic problems confronting the victorious state, but the domestic entanglements that involve two sets of twins and their various ladies fair so far outweigh every other consideration that the piece becomes sheer lunacy and an hilarious safety-value for pent-up wartime emotions, alarums and general hullabaloo.

BELL

The action, as goes without saying, revolves about the aged Aegon's quest for his twin sons—one the hero of Ephesus; the other a refugee from the conquered Syracuse. Each is served by a twin and the consequent confusion is complete—especially in the minds of their wives and sweethearts, who more often than not happen to be the identical bewildered young women.

The whole ancient business is translated into the dizzy dialogue and dizzier "swing" of the present day. There are meters on the chariot taxicabs; newspapers hewn from stone are hawked on the street corners; ice cream chariots vend refreshment on a stick; the streetcar charioteer wears a modern coin container and Miss Raye, when she goes into her songs and dances, finds the classic Greek measures slightly lacking in "oomph" and proceeds to impart a generous dose of the African slaves' "hi-de-ho" to them. And that's the way it goes—even down to the swing fanfare that heralds the every entrance and exit of the Duke, much to his discomfiture.

As long as the spirit of nonsense is unflaggingly sustained, it does not matter a great deal about the "acting" in this sort of thing. The singing is a different matter. Six tunes have been carried over from the stage to the screen, including the outstanding hits of the original Rodgers and Hart score. Top honors in this department, of course, go to Allan Jones, cast as the two identical Antipholuses, and Martha Raye, whose rowdy roundelays match the goofiness of her vehicle, and her role, perfectly. Rosemary Lane, as one of the plot's nonpareil beauties, also contributes effectively to the musical merit of the melange. Charles Butterworth, as the Duke; Alan Mowbray and Eric Blore, as the tailors hard pressed for the $53,000 for taxes on a $50,000 annual business, bolster the farcical keynote first struck by the Messrs. Jones and Penner. Irene Hervey is a handsome decoration.

"The Boys From Syracuse," as has been pointed out here previously, possesses the virtue of cumulative action and constantly accelerated comedy. The latter, now and again, gets a little flip with the Will H. Hays office, but who cares? Certainly there have been few comic climaxes more thunderous than the cross-country chariot race that winds up exactly where it started and gives the Duke just one more headache to add to his collection. It is here that the clever double-exposure and "process" photography and shrewdly devised "double' sound track lend the cinematic prank a unique quality none other has possessed.

There is nothing "escapist" in the auxiliary feature of the new bill that opened yesterday on Fifteenth street. "Spoils of Conquest," the new issue of "The March of Time," dealing with the international status of the Dutch East Indies, is a minutely enlightening and deeply ominous subject. With customarily careful and complete documentation, it reveals the great resources, industry and productivity of an island empire coveted by all of the seemingly triumphant totalitarian powers. It is by no means a theoretical treatise. Interlarded with its purely objective sequences are "shots" of Japanese and Nazi spokesmen, expressing supreme confidence in Britain's inability to survive and the pacifistic weakness of the United States.

A new release of the popular "Information Please" and the picturized news events further augment a program that is heavily on the silly season side.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Aug. 8.

Nice to see the old gang, the Lanes, Jeffrey Lynn, Claude Rains, Nick Foran and Eddie Albert, doing "Four Mothers."

HOPPER

And what fun on that set! Director Bill Keighley and I got talking together about Emily Stevens, and the excitement she put into a performance. I just found out that Bill directed "Grand Hotel" when it played here on the coast, and from that, started directing pictures. His latest, "No Time for Comedy," I hear, is a wow! . . . But that Eddie Albert certainly holds the spotlight where I'm concerned—I suppose because I wanted six sons just like him. He said, "I want to live a thousand lives."

"Well, what do you think you're doing?" asked Jeffrey Lynn. "You've slung hash as a singing waiter—" "Yes, but I wanted to go to West Point." "Well, you were near it in 'Brother Rat.' You certainly headed a military parade in that one." Then Eddie got to thinking about it and said, "Well, being an actor, I guess you do live all those lives. I always wanted to monkey around with a lot of test tubes. Come on, Hedda, let me show you the laboratory they rigged up for me in this one. And when they were shooting the scene, I felt exactly like a scientist," said he.

I guess that's the reason everybody wants to act. You taste the joys of other people's existences without the hardships of living them. Eddie's planning another sea jaunt into Mexico, and promises to introduce me to his pal, John Northpole, who wrestles with octopi.

If Director Eddie Buzzell has his way, you'll see some swell chase scenes in the Marx Brothers' picture, "Go West." Guess Eddie took a squint at "When the Daltons Rode'," 'cause he's trying to get scenes from William S. Hart's, Tom Mix's, Art Acorn's and other pictures for "Go West." As for me, I'd like to see the Marxes do their own riding . . . But I don't want to sit behind Irene Rich when they preview that picture. During "When the Daltons Rode" she "Oh'd and "Ah'd"—squealed "Look out!"—"Oh, dear!"—"Oh, heavens!" as Shirley Temple might have been expected to do a few years ago—but never did.

And a hand to Jane Withers' mother, who's turned down a cool $40,000 for a personal appearance tour for Jane, because her little girl needs a real vacation. So six of Jane's friends go with her to have fun at the Withers' home at Lake Arrowhead . . . Hollywood has been amused by the great friendship between Liz Whitney and Gene Towne. I understand some of the Whitney money is backing Gene's pictures. Good investment for both.

Rochester and dusky Theresa Harris, dressed in heavenly blue, were shooting dice in a goo-goo gorgeous kitchen set for "Love Thy Neighbor." Rochester didn't know it, but Theresa brought her own dice and took him for $260. And just as he said, "I'll be Old Black Joe before I can earn that much money from Jack Benny," Jack walked in.

The annual Association of Bathing Suit Manufacturers voted Rita Hayworth the best Hollywood gal "to boost and fill out" their product. There are other cuties around town who fill them out mighty nicely, too.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Aug. 8 (INS).—The always original Joe Pasternak has finally persuaded Fred Astaire to make "Special Delivery" at Universal. Not that Joe wants the nimble-footed Astaire to go into his dance because he had different ideas. He will make a comedian out of the dancer and prove to the world that it isn't always necessary for Fred to dance every time he walks out on the screen. Any stepping he does in "Special Delivery" will be incidental.

LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Fred will be teamed with a pair of picture stealers, Gloria Jean and Baby Sandy, so he will have to work mighty hard to hold his own. Henry Koster, who, with Pasternak, brought Deanna Durbin to fame, will direct this little epic.

If "The Bride Went West" is half as funny in the movie version as it is in the telling, Paramount will have a rip-snorting comedy. The tale is about a husband and wife and the other woman who all go to Reno to live for economic reasons while the divorce is pending. In certain auto camps they have a bridal suite which they turn over to couples who can prove they were married within two weeks. So the about-to-be-divorced pair get married all over again and produce the certificate in order to get free room rent. The story is by Charles O'Neil and Duane Decker. Fred MacMurray plays mister and Paulette Goddard the missus, while Patricia Morison is the other woman.

Sensibly, I think, the movies are forgetting the anti-Nazi propaganda which was so prevalent a few months ago. The public, in these days of stress and strife, needs to laugh and that is the reason it is comedy with a big C that has become king of the entertainment world. Over on the RKO lot they are getting ready to put "Father Takes A Wife," a hilarious little number by Herbert Fields, on the screen. Herb, the son of Lew Fields, is very talented, and he'll move into RKO to do the screen play for Lee Marcus, the producer, after he finishes the stage musical, "Panama Hattie."

A highly dramatic story that might have been taken right out of a novel was told me at a dinner party the other evening. The beautiful Maude Thyssen, who was so pitifully disfigured in the automobile accident which killed Alex Mdivani, first husband of Barbara Hutton, is now in London. Unhappy, divorced by her husband, the wealthy munitions maker, she went to work in a clinic to try and pick up the threads of her broken life. An operation restored her beauty, and, believe it or not, she is now one of the best friends of the King of Belgium. Undoubtedly they were drawn together by the similar tragedies in their lives.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Marcia and Phil Harris, I am sorry to say, have said adieu to their marriage. He is with his band in Dallas, and she is here; Herta Margot, the Viennese actress who is so-o pretty, has taken out her first citizenship papers; Desi Arnaz's birthday gift to Lucille Ball was a heart-shaped lapel watch; the pretty girl Garson Kanin is beauing here and there is his 20-year-old sister; Maureen O'Hara has just parted with two refactory wisdom teeth; is Frances Neal Artie Shaw's new heartbeat? They have been stepping out the last three nights.

Rumor is strong that Franchot Tone and a New York gal have marriage on their minds; Alex D'Arcy is buying a house in Brentwood, and he doesn't care who knows that he hopes Arleen Whelan will share it with him; Judy Garland telephoned Mickey Rooney in New York to tell him how good he is in "Strike Up The Band;" Edmund O'Brien, once Nancy Kelly's hearthrob, is devoting himself to Babs Stuart on the Burns and Allen show; Bud Ernst's father, who was so seriously injured in the motor accident that killed his mother, is reported improved. Gwynne Pickford Ernst and Bud flew East when the word reached them.

Warner Baxter has been nursing a miserable cold; a card enclosed with a cigar announces the arrival of Beulah, born August 3 to Elsie, famous bovine star; Kay Feltus, now in the hometown of Bloomington is getting top billing for her monogram picture which puts Boris Karloff in the second spot; Eddie Cantor and Ben Hecht are huddling over a musical which they may produce on Broadway this fall; the Melville Coopers have kissed and made up and everyone is happy; Rochester's new valet's name is Saturday; Judy Garland and Dave Rose are cooling.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

Palace

With a gilded company to interpret Jane Austen's gentle nineteenth century irony into fuller-blown twentieth century humor, "Pride and Prejudice" has so caught the Palace public's fancy that it's being continued for a second week.

For this triumph of a past century's provincial authoress, the box office pulling power of Laurence Olivier and Greer Garson is the chief single reason. It's the names that lure the ticket buyers, but it's the general charm and wit that sends the customers home telling Susie Q. and Johnny Appleseed that the marrying Bennets are highly amusing to watch.

In their adaptation of the Helen Jerome play, Aldous Huxley and Jane Murfin have effected a successful compromise. Their primary aim has been to please 80,000,000 moviegoers. If in doing so they satisfied the exclusive Austenites, so much the better. The purists, however, were not their chief concern. Their screen play tells of the provincial Bennet family, whose mother schemes her wits away to marry five daughters into as brilliant security as the county can muster. They accented the romance and with Olivier and the erstwhile Mrs. Chips to embody their romance who can blame them?

What made Jane Austen's story the rare classic that it is were her astute observations on her neighbors, their complacency and ambition, their inanities and conceits. As a barrier to married bliss she created Lady Catherine de Bourgh, a harridan of the highest order who fondly believes she rules the earth and acts the role of the snobbish Englishwoman than whom the universe holds no one more snobbish. The incredible self-appreciation of a clergyman, her sycophant today, Mr. Collins is a prickly caricature. Mother Bennet is a tiresome bore and will always be a tiresome bore. To please those who must have a dash of sweetness to finish off their movie-meal, the scenarists have hinted that Lady Catherine is really a sweet old thing, that Mr. Collins is just a simpering librarian and that Mrs. Bennet will have done with her tiresome ways now that the girls are set with husbands. All of which is too bad.

But for the film man, who gives not a big "D" for Jane's sharp lancets, this is beside the point. "Pride and Prejudice" is a beguiling and unusual film, pleasing the ears with some of the most scintillating conversation to slide off a sound track.

Besides Miss Garson and Olivier, the cast boasts Edna May Oliver, Mary Boland, Melville Cooper, Maureen O'Sullivan, Edmund Gwenn and Frieda Inescourt.

Also continuing at the Palace is a diverting "Passing Parade," a short on three minor matters which have fascinating backgrounds: the numeral 7, coat lapels and doodling. A color cartoon and the latest newsreel complete the bill.R. L. C.

Columbia

"Andy Hardy Meets Debutante"—and sticks around for a fourth F street week. This latest of the Hardy series did so well at the Columbia in the seven days just ended that the management is chucking all other plans to the fishes and holding on to a good thing.

One of the angles that will strike you about "Andy Hardy Meets Debutante" is its gentle handling of New York's upper crust. Time was when a good honest Westerner arrived in Bagdad on the Subway, he got the general runaround, especially from the four hundred and its butlers. Times have changed. Andy gets a nice reception from a busy socialite, a genial smile from a butler and a mild reprimand from a swank cafe-owner when he eats up a $35 dinner with seven buck in his pocket. Yes, indeedy, times have changed and the rich are all of a sudden human.

We'll say nothing about the plot, but merely observe that Mickey Rooney winds up with three pretty girls in his bureau-top gallery. Lewis Stone is worried about the Carvel orphanage this time and he too, when he comes up against a tough New York lawyer, pulls a fast one. He exhibits a country orphan and the erstwhile meanie just signs away his client's money at the sight of the scraggly little one.

Fay Holden, Judy Garland, Cecelia Parker, Sara Haden and Diana Lewis are the other players of importance.

The New Yorker

By Ilka Chase — Radio, Screen Performer

[Leonard Lyons, regular conductor of this column, is vacationing.]

DEAR LEONARD:
I'm very flattered you should have asked me to write a column for you, but scared. I hope I don't let you down.

HAVE YOU CAUGHT Larry Adler's superb job of harmonica playing at the Starlight Roof of the Waldorf? He did make me laugh the other day—said that when he was touring small towns in Australia, playing the local movie theaters, he spotted an enormous 24 sheet exhorting the citizens—"not to miss Larry Adler, the highest priced artist ever to play Crow's Nest." . . . Tilly Losch, the lovely Viennese dancer who is married to the Earl of Carnarvon, has placed their magnificent castle at the disposition of the British government, which is using it to house over a hundred children. She is here for the duration of the war.

EVERY YEAR LILY PONS is invited to that town in Maryland that is named after her to officiate at the water lily festival. This year she asked Kostelanetz if he would like to go again and he said eagerly, "Yes, indeed." "Ah, ha," said Lily a little hazy about Southern refreshments, "you want some more of those June Tulips." . . . Clare Boothe and Henry Luce are vacationing in Colorado. She has a new book coming out in the fall called "Europe in the Spring"—tra la . . . Elsa Schiaparelli is still undecided as to whether she will design clothes in this country or not.

ALFRED LUNT claims that acting in "There Shall Be No Night" isn't like being in a play at all, it has such reality and he believes so intensely in his part . . . Paul Draper and Nicky de Molas in Sardi's in an animated discussion of Draper's costumes for the "Little Dog Laughed." . . . I understand the new Walt Disney picture built around the music conducted by Stokowski is enchanting.

Dorothy Stickney, the adorable mother in "Life With Father," is trying to screw up her courage to go on the air but is terrified of the microphone.

STEVE WIMAN posed for James Montgomery Flagg at the Decorators Shop the other day and paid $25 for the drawing, which went to the British relief . . . That reminds me, I took a chance on the gold bracelet and now I've lost the ticket. Oh, well, it doesn't matter, I've never won anything in my life not even in the drug store machines.

TONY SARG, the great marionette and toy man, designed some new pink elephants the other day, fine fat balloon fellows, just for fun. Some high official in the Republican party saw them and was entranced. Result: Sarg is now official mascot manufacturer for the party.

DID YOU KNOW that Gloria Swanson owns a hard metal alloy factory and what's more she understands it . . . Arlene Francis, who's married to Neil Agnew, vice president of Paramount pictures, is planning to accommodate two refugee children on her farm in Connecticut, and Mrs. Herbert Shipman is taking Lady Audrey Stanley's little girl into her home at Newport . . . Saw Gloria Vanderbilt, jr., at the Piping Rock Bath Club the other day—the family beauty is becoming more pronounced . . . Sarah Palfrey Fabian since her Reno divorce wants to resume her maiden name but the sports writers are having a hard time remembering.

I KNOW OF A GIRL who was engaged to a widely traveled young German who spoke excellent English. Something over a year ago she went to Germany to marry him but after she'd been there a bit she decided she couldn't quite swallow that set-up so she said, "Hans, honey, we is through" and came home. We fade out, we fade in, it's a year later. Our girl is standing on a street corner in Canada watching a parade of young Canadian aviators about to embark for England. Suddenly her heart skips a beat, she blinks but that's Hans all right. She runs to a policeman and says, "Hey, there's a German in that parade. I know because I almost married the guy." The policeman took her to the proper authorities who investigated and Hans and five others were interned for the duration.

Miss Perkins Under Attack By Employes

New Promotion Policy For Department Issue of Verbal Battle

By Edward Ryan

Secretary of Labor Perkins and employe organizations in her department are in the midst of a running battle over their new promotion policy, it was learned yesterday.

Secretary Perkins was the target of an attack by Jacob Baker, head of the United Federal Workers, who said that she had refused to discuss "in good faith" important personnel policies with her employes.

By the alleged refusal, Baker charged, "she has placed herself in the untenable position of contributing toward the breakdown of the principles of collective bargaining and sound labor policy.

"Whether she is bored with her job, disturbed by public attacks that have been made upon her, or lacking in understanding of collective bargaining itself, we do not know," said Baker. "We hope her present attitude is temporary."

Miss Perkins Silent

Aides of the Secretary said that Miss Perkins had "no comment" on Baker's statement, but they pointed out that she had met with representatives of the three employe-union locals in the Labor Department July 25 to discuss the promotion policy.

The meeting, officials said, was held after Secretary Perkins on July 12 wrote to the heads of the three locals—Mrs. Nellie Ratchford, of the American Federation of Government Employes; Miss Anna Charest, of the National Federation of Federal Employes, and Oscar Witmer, of the U. F. W., inviting them to submit their suggestions.

After the conference, officials explained, Secretary Perkins gave another day for the union representatives to submit further suggestions. In addition, Robert Smith, personnel director, called the union heads at 3:45 p. m. the day after the conference to ask again if they had more recommendations to submit. All three said they did not, officials reported.

Refused to Post Jobs

Sorest point in the argument, it was indicated, is the question of "posting" vacancies, that is, announcing on the bulletin boards what new jobs are open. Baker's statement said that Secretary Perkins had refused permission to post vacancies on a department-wide basis ever since she took office. Negotiations with several bureaus in the department, said Baker, had brought agreements for "posting" vacancies, but the Secretary's new promotion policy had nullified these agreements.

At the conference two weeks ago, Baker said, the new statement of promotion policy was "hurriedly read" and copies were refused the union. He added that since then the Secretary had refused to meet with his organization and discuss the policy again before it was made public.

Labor officials yesterday released the policy statement with a memorandum dated July 29 from the Secretary to all officers and employes of the department. The Secretary's memo said that "the officers and heads of bureaus and divisions of the DDepartment of Labor have recommended adoption of the attached statement of policy with respect to promotion in the department.

"After careful consideration of this and all other sugestions, I have approved the statement as recommended."

The policy statement said that, except for new employes in the lowest grades, vacancies would be filled "as far as may be found practicable" by promotion of officers and employes already in the department.

Under the policy, the typical procedure for filling a vacancy in any bureau would be this: The bureau chief recommends to the Secretary a list of likely candidates for the vacancy. The list then goes to the personnel office to have the qualifications of each candidate for the new job investigated. If none of them meets the test, the lists of all department employes are combed for more candidates. The personnel office then returns a list of persons eligible for the vacancy to the bureau chief, and the latter makes a final selection. Only when this process failed to produce an eligible person for the vacancy would officials turn to other Government agencies or civil service list for more candidates.

Would Reward Merit

In a close decision between two candidates with equally good qualifications, the job would go to the person who had the longest service in the bureau.

Main purpose of the promotion policy, the statement said, "is to build up organizational efficiency through promotions based on increased ability, value and effectiveness as demonstrated on the job."

No Profit in Presidency, Says Early; Indianan Refuses to Support Willkie

Seattle, Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Stephen T. Early, secretary to President Roosevelt, said today that "if by any accident Wendell Willkie should go into the Government he would be a poorer man when he left it."

EARLY

Early referred to Willkie's suggestion that Federal officials list their financial assets upon entering and leaving office. Willkie said he would publish such a list of his assets and those of members of his family if he is elected.

Indianapolis, Aug. 8 (A.P.).—Gov. M. Clifford Townsend, Democrat, said today he had received a message from John J. O'Connor, former Democratic Representative in Congress from New York, asking him to support Wendell L. Willkie, Republican Presidential candidate.

The Governor said he had replied:

"We do not feel it is wise to change good, dependable farm hands during the harvest."

Harrisburg, Pa., Aug. 8 (A.P.).—Organization of a State-wide Republican group to work for the reelection of President Roosevelt was forecast today by Meredith Meyers, State Democratic chairman.

"We've had offers from many Republicans who have signified they want to work for Roosevelt," Meyers declared. "I don't believe there's a county in the State that doesn't have a lot of Republicans willing to go on record for Roosevelt, just like they did in 1936."

The proposed Republican organization would be used, he said, to offset activities of the Willkie clubs that are enlisting "independent" Democratic voters in Pennsylvania.

Mrs. Paul Fitzsimons, vice chairman of the Republican National Committee, yesterday discussed with Chairman Joseph W. Martin, jr., plans for the Eastern division headquarters in New York, where she will have her office with Samuel J. Pryor, jr., chairman of this division.

Mrs. Fitzsimons, who is the mother of Gov. William H. Vanderbilt, of Rhode Island, and national committeewoman from that State, declared that she has not the slightest doubt that Rhode Island would be safely carried in November by Wendell Willkie.

"It is remarkable to note the change in sentiment among the mill and factory workers of my State who formerly were strong for Roosevelt and the New Deal," she said.

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 8 (U.P.).—Oswald D. Heck, speaker of the Assembly, tonight eliminated himself from the list of possible Republican candidates to oppose Democratic Senator James M. Meade, of Buffalo, in the fall elections, the major obstacle faced by New York Republican leaders for a united "Willkie for President" front.

The State G. O. P. leaders, meeting ostensibly to determine a date and the city for the State party convention, are attempting to weld with the Willkie supporters the defeated proponents of New York District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey's nomination as Presidential candidate.

John Lord O'Brian is being discussed as a compromise Senate candidate. State Chairman Edwin F. Jaeckle and National Committeeman J. Russell Sprague, Dewey's Presidential nomination campaign manager, are believed opposed to a Senatorial candidate named by the Willkie forces.

Early said President Roosevelt would be reelected "beyond any doubt." He came here while on vacation for an overnight visit with President Roosevelt's son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger. He greeted Mrs. Boettiger with a kiss as he alighted from the plane.

Early was accompanied by John A. Kennedy, Clarksburg (W. Va.) newspaper publisher and radio station owner, Harry C. Butcher, Washington, D. C., vice president of the Columbia Broadcasting System, and Lou Ruppel, C. B. S. publicity man.

Hit by Electric Train, Youth Lives To Tell About It

Henry W. Gardner, 19, struck by a Pennsylvania electric train at New York avenue and Bladensburg road northeast yesterday, was able to tell about it last night.

Seriously injured with a compound fracture of the left arm, severe lacerations and possible internal injuries, the youth was conscious at Casualty Hospital last night and doctors gave him an even chance to recover.

He told police he had left his home, 2205 Channing street northeast, and was walking to work. He waited at the Pennsylvania Railroad tracks for onetrain to pass and walked behind it into the path of an electric locomotive.

The impact knocked him clear of the tracks and saved him from being mangled under the wheels. The train, operated by Eugene Bill, 61, of 737 Twelfth street southeast, was traveling fast and did not stop until it reached the roundhouse, nearly half a mile away, it was reported.

Rack Captures Printcraft Golf Championship

Heimer Bows In Play-Off at Beaver Dam

Victor Retires Hagen Trophy in Taking Third Straight Printcraft Title

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

The Washington contingent fell down in its bid for the seventeenth annual Union Printcraft International Golf Association championship yesterday at Beaver Dam as Edward J. Rack, a 27-year-old apprentice printer on the McKeesport (Pa.) Daily News, won the title for the third straight year and retired the Walter Hagen Trophy.

Rack was extended beyond the regulation 72-hole route for his triumph, however, as Edgar Heimer, owner of the Progressive Printing Co., here and a member of Beaver Dam and Manor clubs, tied the new champion with a 313 total but lost in the playoff.

Rack led Charles Ficco, a local printer, by two shots entering yesterday morning's final round but Ficco started 6-5-7 and was soon out of the running. Rack had his trouble, too, going out in 45 and Heimer, seven shots behind at 54 holes, caught him with a 38. Heimer finished first with a 39 and 77 for 313 and Rack, who needed a four to win, managed to scramble a five to tie on the eighteenth for a 39, 84 and 313.

Heimer Wins First Two Holes

Rack, winner the last two years in Cincinnati and Pittsburgh, and Heimer, hardly figured as a championship contender in the pro-tourney dope, started the 18-hole playoff after lunch. The local linksman won the first two holes, picking up two shots on the first and one on the second with a birdie to take a three-stroke lead. Heimer had trouble on three and six, taking a six and seven, and Rack picked up the three shots and four more, and boosted his margin to five shots at the finish. He was 75 in the playoff to Heimer's 80.

Rack's tournament rounds were 77, 76, 76, 84, 75, to Heimer's 80, 79, 77, 77, 80.

The first day's coleaders, Joe Balestri, of the host club, and Ficco, finished in a tie for third place with 317 and Balestri won the trophy on the flip of a coin. The latter finished with 79 for 317 and Ficco 86 for 317. John H. Kent, of Boston, finished first in the championship class with 78 for 318, followed by Russell Allen, Kansas City, Mo., 80 for 321 and former champion Edgar Merkle, of this city, with 86 for 326.

Heimer, Balestri Take Trophy

The two-man team trophy went to the Washington team of Heimer and Balestri, the latter winning the toss over Ficco. The closet to the hole cup was won by Franklin Brannock, of Baltimore, with a shot 7 feet 11 inches from the pin on the seventeenth. He was one of the highest scorers in Class D.

The prize list was ample, all 13

Indians Split, Lose Chance To Gain Lead

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, Aug. 8.—The Cleveland Indians bounced into coleadership of the American League—and right out again—today as they split a doubleheader with the St. Louis Browns to remain a half game behind Detroit.

The pace-setting Tigers were idle and the Indians caught them by snapping through a 7 to 4 victory over the Brownies in the opener, but kicked away the chance to move out in front by dropping the nightcap 2 to 1.

The goat of the defeat was Cleveland's pitcher, Johnny Humphries, who was charged with the defeat despite the fact he set the Browns down with a mere three hits.

The run that eventually spelled victory for the Browns came in the hitless sixth inning on Don Heffner's long fly to leftfield with the bases loaded.

Credit for the win went to Elden Auker, his ninth of the season, against eight defeats.

Bobby Feller scored his nineteenth victory of the year in the first game. He yielded ten hits, but coasted to an easy triumph after his comrades gave him a healthy early lead.

Ken Keltner hit a homer in the sixth inning to give Cleveland a 6-0 lead and Rip Radcliff hit a fourbagger in the home half of the same inning for the Browns' first run.

Radcliff, the league's leading hitter, helped his batting average with three hits in four times at bat in the opener, but slid back without a marker in the second.

Dodgers Beat Giants In 12th on Home Run

By the Associated Press

New York, Aug. 8.—The Brooklyn Dodgers maintained their mastery over the Giants today with a 6-to-3 victory on Dolph Camilli's twelfth home run with two on and two out in the twelfth inning.

It was the ninth triumph in 12 games for the Dodgers against the Giants and continued their record of not having lost a game in the Polo Grounds this year.

Two of Brooklyn's other runs also came on a homer, a blast by Peewee Reese with one on to tie the score in the seventh inning, while Nick Witek accounted for two of New York's runs with a four-master in the second.

Brooklyn's victory went to the credit of Lefty Wesley Flowers, recruited from Louisville last week. He took over in the seventh after Curt Davis had been removed for a pinchhitter and pitched three-hit shutout ball for six innings. He gave seven walks.

Bill Lohrman went the route for New York, yielding ten hits. A feature of the game was the fielding of Burgess Whitehead at second base. He handled 14 chances faultlessly.

Monteagudo Falters And Athletics Conquer; Ferrell's Bad Play Is Aid

By Shirley Povich.
Post Staff Writer

As 3,000 customers were fondly contemplating the Nats' fourth straight victory, the last-place Athletics suddenly became obstreperous in the ninth inning yesterday, tied the score, and applied a two-run crusher in the tenth. The final figures were 6 to 4.

Little Rene Monteagudo was seemingly en route to a 4-3 triumph in that ninth inning after pitching five consecutive shut-out innings in a relief role, when the A's cut loose.

A sparkling one-hand pick-up by Buddy Myer disposed of Pinch Hitter Al Simmons at the start of the ninth, but Bennie McCoy put the tying run on base with a single into right field, and at that point the venerable Connie Mack made a happy choice of pinch hitters. He inserted husky Frank Hayes to bat for Bill Lillard, and Hayes responded with a long two-bagger into left field that tied the score at 4-4.

Similarly, one was out when the A's started cuffing Monteagudo in the tenth. Sam Chapman, who had authored his seventeenth home run of the season earlier in the proceedings, singled into left field, and Bob Johnson then produced the winning run. He lashed a hard drive down the first base line which skidded off Bloodworth's mitt into right field for a two-bagger, scoring Chapman. A third straight hit—Siebert's double to center—scored the second run of the inning. George Case's one-hand catch of Rubeling's long drive averted further trouble at that point.

The Nats' grief, however, dated from the second inning when Walter Masterson developed a ghastly spell of wildness and Rick Ferrell tossed a strange sort of error into the proceedings. Masterson walked four batters in the inning, Ferrell made an uncalled-for wild throw to third base, and the A's came up with two runs without a hit.

Monteagudo got the pitching job in the fourth inning and with the help of some spectacular support pitched shutout ball until the ninth. The Nats meanwhile stirred up enough runs to tie the score in the fifth and take a 4-3 lead in the seventh.

Speed Boy George Case moved the Nats in front when he bunted George Caster's first pitch and beat it out. He promptly stole second, went to third on Lewis' infield out and moved home on Walker's long hoist to Chapman.

Masterson immediately pitched away that 1-0 lead. He walked Johnson to open the second inning, and with one out later he walked Wagner. On a fourth ball to McCoy that would have filled the bases, Ferrell, thinking the ball was a strike, threw to third base; or, rather, at third base. He tried to check the throw, with the result that the ball went far wide of Travis into foul territory and both Johnson and Wagner scored.

There was nothing tainted, however, about the run the A's scored

Hadley Loser As Boston Takes Series

Cronin's Single Off Gomez Drives in Winning Run in 9th

By the Associated Press

Boston, Aug. 8.—The Red Sox crowded 7 of their 13 hits into the last two innings today to overtake the New York Yankees and nail down their fourth victory of the five-game series, 6 to 5.

Johnny Murphy, relief pitcher, converted into a starter today by the desperate Joe McCarthy, held the slugging Sox to two runs in the first seven innings—both coming on Jimmie Foxx's twenty-sixth homer in the sixth.

But in the eighth, Boston pounced on Murphy and Bump Hadley for two runs off three singles and a double and in the ninth added two more on a walk and three singles, the payoff blow being a single by Manager Joe Cronin off Lefty Gomez. Hadley was charged with the defeat.

Emerson Dickman went the route for the Red Sox, giving up nine hits. He hit Joe Gordon with a pitched ball in the fifth and Gordon slung his bat in the direction of the mound as he trotted toward first. The two players started toward each other spouting hot words, but were separated without any blows being struck.

Mrs. Beard Sells Blockade, 3-Time Winner of Md. Cup

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, Aug. 8.—Mrs. E. Read Beard announced today she had sold her veteran jumper, Blockade, winner of the last three runnings of the Maryland Hunt Cup, to C. E. Tuttle, master of the Caves Wood Farm, Garrison, Md.

Mrs. Beard did not disclose the amount received for the 11-year-old son of Man o' War and Rock Emerald, the leading timber horse of the country.

Tuttle said blockade would continue to be trained by Janon Fisher, jr., who conditioned him for his three winning efforts in the Hunt Cup. Blockade was bred and raised at Mrs. Dodge Sloane's Brookmeade Stable Farm, Upperville, Va.

Burk, Rowing Champ, to Retire

Handsome Red-Head Wants to Give Others a Chance

By the Associated Press

Bridgeboro, N. J., Aug. 8.—Handsome Joe Burk stepped down voluntarily today from the pedestal he has occupied for nearly three years as world amateur rowing champion.

"There is nothing to look forward to unless the international situation brightens unexpectedly," the red-headed fruit farmer declared.

Besides, he wants to give the "other fellows" a chance at the diamond sculls, Canadian single sculls, and Gold Challenge Cup titles he holds.

"I think it is a good thing for me and for the rowing game that I quit now," the former University of Pennsylvania sculler said at the farm where he now is devoting most of his time to attempts to develop champion apples and peaches.

With Shirley Povich

Perfectly within his rights is Manager Oscar Vitt, of the Indians, in his squawk that Buck Newsom should not be permitted to pitch with tape around his broken thumb. At first blush it may appear to be a picayunish protest, but there is nothing picayunish about the money the Cleveland Indians would draw down if they beat the Tigers out of the pennant.

POVICH

Since returning to his pitching chores, Newsom has been working with his thumb bandaged, but Vitt has served warning that he will protest to the league if the big Tiger pitcher appears in the box against the Indians with tape on his thumb. Vitt can be excused for his squawk. The wonder is that he is not protesting Newsom's taped thumb not only in games against the Indians, but in all league games.

On Newsom's pitching success depends not only the pennant chances of the Tigers, but the Indians as well. The rules state distinctly that a pitcher may not wear a bandage on his throwing hand. It all comes under the heading of taking "foreign matter" to the pitching mound for application to the ball or otherwise. And a bandage certainly is not natural pitching paraphernalia.

With the tape on his thumb, Newsom doubtless is able to impart an unnatural spin to the ball. The bandage exaggerates Newsom's "stuff." It is tantamount to doctoring the ball with a foreign substance, a trick that old-time pitchers used cunningly before such freak deliveries as the emery ball, the shine ball and the spitball were ruled out in 1920 when the big leagues went pure.

There is plenty of precedent for Vitt's squawk. Back in 1924, Ty Cobb kicked up an awful fuss in the American League when Tom Zachary appeared with tape on his pitching hand in the late days of the pennant race that season. Zachary broke his thumb fielding a line drive and returned to the mound with tape on the member. There were no protests until Zachary was midway on a long winning streak.

Zachary's thumb healed nicely, but he discovered that the tape on his hand was making his knuckle ball do things he could never impart to it before. He was in no mood to remove the bandage until Cobb carried his protest to American League headquarters. Interpreting the rule strictly, the league president ordered Zachary to take off the tape or stay off the pitching mound. Zachary never had the same success thereafter.

When Dazzy Vance was winning ball games for the Brooklyn Dodgers, National League managers squawked loudly over the fact that the shirt sleeve on his pitching arm was in shreds. They declared that the shredded sleeve dangling in their vision disturbed the batters and gave Vance an unfair advantage. The National League president agreed with them and ordered Vance to wear a clean shirt that was wholly intact.

Four years ago the Detroit Tigers, led by Manager Mickey Cochrane, felt constrained to protest the pitching habits of Ed Linke. Victim of a strange case that baffled doctors, Linke suffered from a lack of pulse in the fingers of his pitching hand. For weeks, he was unable to grip a ball. In fact, he couldn't lift a shoe with his pitching hand, and there was no sense of feeling whatsoever in his fingers.

In Florida a doctor applied heat treatments to Linke that temporarily restored the pulse to his fingers. A special heating pad was devised for him. Chemicals in the pad generated heat with rubbing, and it was made to fit into the hip pocket of Linke's uniform. Between pitches he would rest his pitching hand on the pad, and the heat restored his grip on the ball. He began to win games again.

But the Tigers squawked. The fact that the heating pad, innocent enough, was enabling Linke to earn his livelihood at the only business he knew met with no sympathy from the Detroit club. Cochrane regarded Linke as a pitcher who might beat 'em, and he raised a howl to League President Harridge. Harridge had no alternative but to command Linke to discontinue taking the pad to the mound with him, and the fellow soon passed out of the big leagues.

But clubs have restored to tricks that could not be so easily legislated against. In Boston, at Fenway Park, not so many years ago a certain portion of the pitching mound contained lime that visiting pitchers were unaware of, and their habit of grabbing a handful of dirt was ruinous. The ball skidded off their fingers, and they developed an unnatural wildness. Red Sox pitchers, of course, never trifled with the lime.

Vitt's squawk anent Newsom is not an unnatural one. The Indians are engaged in a tight race with the Tigers for the pennant, and Vitt would be derelict in his duty if he didn't capitalize on any advantage that the rules permit. A bandage on a thumb may appear to be a petty affair, but Vitt knows what a help it is to a pitcher who is able to get just a little extra stuff on the ball.

French Weakens Thrice as Cincinnati Pushes Over Three Runs to Emerge Victors, 3-1

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, Aug. 8.—Southpaw Larry French allowed two hits in each of three frames today and Cincinnati made all but one count to defeat Chicago, 3 to 1. The Reds thus gained an even break in the series and gave Bucky Walters his sixteenth triumph of the year.

It was the champions first decision since Sunday in Boston and their third victory in nine games.

The Cubs got away to a lead—with their only scoring—in the first as Walters fed the first of his three walks to Stan Hack and the third baseman tallied on an infield out and Jim Gleeson's single.

But the Rhinelanders promptly tied things up on two walks and Ernie Lombardi's single. With two away in the fifth, they scored once, and in the eighth two singles, Frank McCormick's third pass and a hit batsman produced another.

Dominic Dallessandro led the Chicago attack with a double and two singles.

Play started at 2 o'clock, an hour earlier than usual, in order that the game might be over by the time funeral services were conducted (5 p. m., E. S. T.) in Visalia, Calif., for the Reds' second-string catcher, Willard Hershberger, who killed himself in Boston Saturday.

Appendicitis Hits 'Skin Rookie; Parks Hurt

Both Players May Undergo Operations

Star Center May Be Through With Pro Football; Tackler Complained of Ache

By Al Hailey

A Staff Correspondent

Spokane, Wash., Aug. 8.—Double trouble hit the Washington Redskins camp today as physicians announced that Mickey Parks may be through with professional football because of an old knee injury, and appendicitis laid low a rookie tackle from Southern California, Bob Fisher.

After examining the Redskin center's right knee, Dr. Richard Flaherty announced that Parks has a broken cartilege and may have to undergo an operation. Parks turned out nevertheless, for afternoon drill but only did a bit of jogging around the track. Trainer "Doc" Mauro said Mickey will play this season if it's at all possible, but Coach Ray Flaherty was glum.

Fisher, who has been playing with the Los Angeles Bulldogs pro football team since being graduated in 1938, complained of a stomach ache. Dr. Flaherty upon examining him found all symptoms of appendicitis, sent him to bed with ice packs. He is awaiting results to determine whether an operation will be necessary.

Parks, All-Big Six center at Oklahoma in 1937, injured the knee in the Detroit game in Washington last year and was in a hospital for 15 days.

At the time it was thought to be a torn ligament, and physicians did not think an operation advisable.

When Parks turned out for the third day of preseason work this morning at Gonzaga University the knee was so stiff he had to walk with a pronounced limp.

Trainer Ray (Doc) Mauro immediately packed Mickey off to the doctor. If Parks is benched it will be a serious blow to the Tribe, despite the presence of alternate center Vic Carroll and three new men, Bob Titchenal, of San Jose State; Steve Andrako, all-Western center at Ohio State last fall, and Frank Kiss, former South Carolina star.

Yearling Brings $18,000 at Sales

Saratoga Springs, N. Y., Aug. 8 (AP).—The rubber bands were taken off bank rolls at the yearling sales held here tonight and the biggest sales so far were recorded when 60 head sold for a total of $128,475—an average of $2,141.

There was a mixup in the sale of the brown colt by Sickle—Friendly Gal. It was announced that Mrs. Ethel V. Mars, owner of the Milky Way Farms, had purchased the colt for $18,000, top of the sale and for the year. Hugh Fontaine, trainer for the Brookmeade Stable, made a protest to the sales company that he had bid the $18,000 and was entitled to the colt. Roy Waldron, acting for Mrs. Mars, readily gave up the colt and the Brookmeade Stable got it.

And So to Bed . . . When Day Is Done for the 42 Redskins

Upper—The Gonzaga University gymnasium at Spokane is transformed into a vast dormitory for the Washington Redskins pending more permanent sleeping quarters. Below—Two big tackles dunk their tender tootsies in brine after a foot-pounding workout on the clumpy field. This will go on for weeks until their dogs get tough. Wee Willie Wilkin (left) and Bill Young do not seem to be very happy about it all

Cameo Engages Heurich Today For 2d Half

If the Cameo Furniture outfit in The Washington Post Industrial League can beat Heurich Brewers on the South Ellipse at 5 p. m. today they re assured of the second-half flag.

If Heurich wins the teams will be thrown into a deadlock. Otherwire, Cameo and the Brewers—winners of the first half—will start a three-game playoff for the season title on Monday.

Ed Colliflower is expected to pitch for Heurich tomorrow with Fee Collier catching. Manager Connie Wyche, of Cameo, will start Frank Deavers, in the box.

Red Sox Move In For Ladies' Day; Leonard on Mound

The Nats move into more fashionable company today when they open a three-game series against the third-place Red Sox who are fresh from four wins over the Yankees in a five-game series.

It is a ladies' day game at Griffith Stadium, with Dutch Leonard scheduled to take the mound for the Nats. Boston's pitcher will be Lefty Fred Ostermueller, who has been staging a comeback after his inability to win earlier in the season. Ostermueller is a long-time nemesis of the Nats.

For the Red Sox, it will be another crucial series. The Boston team is only six games out of first place and considers itself still a pennant threat due to a turn for the better in their pitching.

Cox Shoots Record 62 At Congressional Club

Wiffy Cox played one of his greatest rounds of golf yesterday at Congressional, a ten-under par 62 that set a new unofficial course record. His round included a great back nine of 28, seven under par, and was featured by an eagle deuce on the sixteenth where he holed a full eight-iron shot, some 125 yards.

Cox, who is usually in the high 60's or par at the worst around his home course, turned in 34, three under par, just another nine holes.

But on the back nine Wiffy went to town. He was banging his iron shots right on the pin and his birdie putts were all within the 10-foot circle. He birdied 10 and 11, parred the twelfth, birdied 13, 14 and 15, and then climaxed the round with the eagle deuce on the sixteenth. He missed birdie chances on the last two holes, getting a bad break on an approach shot on the eighteenth.

Dr. R. A. Keilty, Harry G. Pitt, of Manor, and George Brobeck were his playing partners.

Wiffy birdied the first hole on the out nine and then parred through the eighth and finished with two birdies. He reached the green on the par five fifth in two shots, but three-putted, his only near-misplay of the round.

Tommy Armour played Congressional in 63 years ago, but the course has been changed since that time. Sammy Snead, in the Open qualifying rounds last year, established a competitive record with a 65.

Cox's lowest individual score is a 59 over the Marine and Field Club course in Brooklyn, a not-too-easy public links course where he was professional.

Three years ago, when at Kenwood, he shot a 63, eight under par.

Elizabeth Hicks Wins Women's Western Golf Play

By the Associated Press

Chicago, Aug. 8.—A desperate bid by Ellamae Williams, of Chicago, gave Elizabeth Hicks only a scare today as the Long Beach, Calif., star won her second straight women's Western golf derby.

Miss Hicks wound up with an 8-over-par 84 for the day at Westmoreland's links and a 72-hole total of 314. Miss Williams, who began the final round 11 strokes back in second place, finished with 320 after having at one time reduced the champion's margin to four strokes.

Woman Breaks 100 Straight Skeet Targets

Mrs. Smythe Sets Pace in 12-Gauge Event at Syracuse

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Aug. 8.—A woman broke 100 straight targets for the first time in skeet shooting competition today as dark-haired little Mrs. M. L. Smythe, Aurora, Ohio, helped set pace in the featured 12-gauge event of the National Skeet championships.

Shooting from a half-crouching stance and lining up the flying clays with swift sweeps of her heavy gun, the petite woman star joined seven men at the top of the first day's standings.

Dick Shaughnessy, Dedham, Mass., schoolboy who won the small-gauge title at the opening of the meet Tuesday; H. M. Cole, Springfield, Mass.; Alex Kerr, Los Angeles, Calif.; Gerald Batten, Chicago; W. H. Turlburt, Detroit; Dr. J. H. Nichols, Cleveland, Ohio, and C. H. Poulton, San Antonio, Tex. Twenty-six others scored 99s, among them Patricia Laursen, Akron, Ohio, college girl with two championships already to her credit in this tournament, and 15-year-old Bobbie Parker, of Tulsa, also a title-winner thus far this week.

A record field of 269 shooters competed today.

Ken Overlin Beats Ben Brown Again In Atlanta Bout

By the Associated Press

Atlanta, Aug. 8.—Ken Overlin, of Washington, D. C., recognized in several States as the world's middleweight champion, won a decision over Ben Brown, of Atlanta, tonight in a 12-round nontitle bout refereed by former heavyweight champion, Jimmy Braddock.

Overlin weighed 161¼ and Brown 162. The Atlantan was knocked to his knee twice, but did not take the count. Braddock gave Overlin six rounds, Brown two and called four draws. Overlin tired at the last under a slashing attack.

It was the sixth time the two fighters have met. Overlin got three decisions and two draws in the previous matches.

Golden Terror Victor Over Bockwinkle

In the feature match of last night's wrestling show at Turner's Arena, the Golden Terror disposed of Warren Bockwinkle with Referee Casey Berger counting out the latter when, with his head twisted between the tangled ropes, he was unable to free himself.

In an added attraction the two-man villian team of Lou Plummer and Ed Newman defeated Tommy O'Toole and Tommy Mahoney, respectively. Mahoney and O'Toole both went out in eight minutes.

Emil Dusek won over Maurice LaChapelle, also in 18½ minutes.

Parker Upset By Prusoff In Rye Tennis

By the Associated Press

Rye, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Frankie Parker, of Pasadena, Calif., a finalist in the Eastern grass court championships last year, was bumped out of the tournament in the quarter-final round today by Hank Prusoff, Seattle giant, whose tennis career seemed finished five years ago after he broke his back in an elevator accident.

Prusoff had hardly completed his masterful 6—4, 6—3 conquest of the Nation's second ranking player when Bryan (Bitsy) Grant, another veteran on the down grade, turned in another upset by eliminating Joe Hunt, of Annapolis, fifth ranking player of 1939, unranked this year because of insufficient play.

The parade of surprises seemed destined to reach a dizzy peak, when Frank Shields, of New York, won the first set of his match against defending champion Bobby Riggs, but Riggs staged one of his characteristic rallies and downed the former internationalist, 6—8, 6—4, 6—2.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Aug. 8.—Every time a Dodger, Giant or Yank hit a triple, the refrigeration industry of New York digs down in its pocket and sends ten underprivileged New York kids on a two-week vacation in the country. During July the three clubs hit 25 triples, which gave 250 children a squint at their first cow. Charley Keller made it possible for 30 of the 250 to go . . . Al Paul, the songwriter, sends us a copy of his "I Like You Very Much, But I Don't Love You," with a notation that we show it around Jacobs Beach and eradicate the waltzing tendencies of the current fighters . . . Swell reading: "Pittsburgh Phil" by Clem McCarthy and James C. McGill, in the Sepost . . . Glenn Cunningham's swan song, the 1,500-meter race in the Nationals, was a grand one—even if he did finish second to Walter Mehl, of Wisconsin. Glenn's 3:48 was the best time he ever turned in for the distance.

CONSIDINE

Hershberger probably would have replaced Lombardi as the Reds' No. 1 catcher next season . . . The greatest trotter that ever lived, Greyhound, cost only $900 . . . To the intense joy of the auctioneers at the Saratoga Yearling Sale, Mrs. Ethel Mars has returned. The lady bids as if she was using stage money. She has been known to spend as much as $100,000 a year at the sales.

Looks like one of those years when batting honors go to semi-obscure hitters, and if you don't believe that then remember that Buddy Myer, who surprised all by outdistancing the field in 1935, is outhitting DiMaggio . . . Wonder if Connie Mack still thinks that Benny is the real McCoy? Benny, who sold himself to Connie for a $45,000 bonuses and a two-year contract for $10,000 a year, is hitting .255 and fielding about the same . . . If anybody wonders why Detroit is up there, lookit this: Newsom, Rowe and McKain have won 32 and lost only four; and McCosky, Greenberg, Fox, York, Gehringer and Billy Sullivan are hitting .300 or much better . . . Dempsey is finally going to meet Louis Wednesday at the Court of Peace (of all places) at the Fair . . . Jack will spar a round or two against one unnamed opponent, and Louis will referee—as a feature of the free milk fund for babies day.

Greatest visible hunch we've ever seen around horseracing came one night at the Saratoga yearling sale.. A frightened yearling was being walked around the barter ring for the benefit of the bidders when it suddenly stopped, quit its shaking, and walked over and nuzzled contentendly at the impeccable shirtfront of Jock Whitney. For some reason he'll never be able to explain, Whitney didn't buy it.

Several fans have written in to state that they were in the Yankee Stadium the day Josh Gibson, colored catcher, hit a ball so far up into the bleachers in left centerfield that it took one bounce and cleared the outer wall. We had scoffed at Shayne's assertion that Gibson drove one out of the park, something not even Ruth was ever able to do . . . Bob Pastor has given up his ambition to become a newspaper man, after his ring days are over, and will go into politics. There's a street in Saratoga named after Bob. Unlike some of the other streets there, it runs both ways.

Lynch Upsets Dave Johnsen In D. C. Open Net Semifinals

Davey Johnsen's bid for a second major local tennis title was stopped by Hugh Lynch in the semifinals of the District Open Men's championship yesterday at the Edgemoor Club.

Johnsen, the Middle Atlantic titlist, was an overwhelming favorite to defeat Welsh and qualify Barnes, Welsh's opponent for the second time this season but the young G. W. student found the Princeton graduate too much for him and lost in straight sets, 6—3, 6—4.

Johnsen started as though he would dispose of the third-seeded Lynch in regulation time by winning the first two games with comparative ease. However, Lynch crossed the dope by drawing Johnsen away from the net and then winning the crucial points with baseline placements and Johnsen's frequent errors.

After starting the first set with a rush, Johnsen came back to win the first game of the second set, but his stand was short, as Lynch evened the score at 1-all on his set, broke Johnsen's service for a 2—1 lead and looked like the winner throughout.

Jockey Scocca Suffers Broken Arm in Spill at Cumberland

Horse Caught In Jam, Falls At First Turn

Washington Jockey Rushed to Hospital; Double Back Takes Feature in Drive

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Cumberland, Md., Aug. 8.—Jockey Danney Scocca, Washington, D. C., rider, suffered a broken right arm today in a spectacular spill that marked the running of the fourth race. Scocca, who had performed in sensational manner to win the first race after his mount, Rippling On was virtually left at the post, was astride Henry Virginia's Albert D. there was a jam at the first turn and Albert D., racing close to the inside rail, stumbled and fell, throwing Scocca in front of horses.

Scocca was able to stagger to the outside of the track before the horses came around the second time. He was rushed to Allegany Hospital where the arm was set and he will remain there overnight for a complete examination.

The accident also was a blow to Trainer D. P. Venezianno. Albert D. had been placed in the entries at Bel Air seven times without seeing action. After more than three weeks, the horse finally went postward only to be eliminated in the opening furlong. The race was won by R. George's Royal Dot, a $10 shot, strongly handled by Jockey John Hernandez.

The Monarch Handicap, the feature of the Thursday program, brought a driving finish in which W. E. Eichorn's Double Back proved the best of a field of eight. The 4-year-old daughter of Haste won by half a length over Mrs. J. B. Belk's Walter Light with C. B. Phillips' Gay Prank a staggering third.

Jockey Buddy Root took Gay Prank to the top at once as the field got away on the six and a half furlong sprint. Double Back always was close and on the backstretch, Martinez clucked to her. She caught the flying leader, drew out but had to be put to pressure to stave off Walter Light's closing rush.

Double Back paid $7.40 and was clocked in 1:21 2-5, over a good track. Ideal racing weather prevailed and a crowd of 8,000 took part in the sport.

For the second day, the daily double paid a small mutuel. Those who backed the combination of Rippling On and Anya, the latter owned by B. W. Dulaney, of Washington, collected $12.

Dohoev, owned by M. B. Goss, of Winchester, Va., set a new track record for a mile and a quarter in the seventh race. The Kiev mare was clocked in 2:10, clipping two fifths of a second from the mark established here by Bosopi. Sammy Palumbo rode Dohoev.

R. L. Pearce's Edgemont won the day's steeplechase at an $11.40 payoff, much to the disgust of the army of backers of Judges Bid. Edgemont took the lead when Sir Ford lost rider and Judges Bid lacked the punch to catch him. Edgemont is a 10-year-old son of Chatterton.

Phillies Drop 4th in Row to Bees, 6 to 2

Miller Hits Fourth Homer of the Series; Tobin Allows 7 Hits

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Aug. 8.—To the crowd's chant of "We want a hit!" the Phillies fumbled around again today and bowed to the Boston Bees for the fourth consecutive time. The score was 6 to 2.

The Phillies got seven hits, only two for extra bases off Jim Tobin.

For the four-game series, Eddie Miller, Boston shortstop, had a homer per game. He scored Max West ahead of him today in the three-run ninth inning. The other run in that frame was the result of Buddy Hassett's triple and Phil Masi's double.

In Boston's other scoring inning—the fourth—Johnny Cooney, Carvel Rowell and Max West got on base with none out and were scored by a long fly, a single and an infield out.

George Case was the stand-out performer for the Nats yesterday against the Athletics and moves among the leaders in the Man of the Month contest.

To Case, 7 points, because he made three hits, each of which figured in a run and two of which were perfect bunts, and because his stolen base made the first run possible.

To Jimmy Pofahl, 5 points, because his clever play on Rubeling's grounder in the seventh inning cut off two Philadelphia runs.

To Buddy Lewis, 5 points, because his fifth-inning triple scored two runs that tied the score.

To Gee Walker, 4 points, because he drove in three of the Nats' runs.

To Rene Monteagudo, 4 points, because he made an important hit and kept the Nats in the game with his relief pitching until the ninth inning. The totals:

Sidney Hudson	20	George Case	7
Ken Chase	20	Jake Early	7
Cecil Travis	14	Buddy Lewis	5
Gee Walker	12	Rene Monteagudo	4

Bill Ackerman ON FISHING

Crisfield Draws Piscator Clan This Week-End

The clan of Piscator gathers this week-end at Crisfield down on the Eastern Shore for the fifth time in as many years—the Chesapeake Bay Fishing Fair. Actual competition is from daylight on the 10th to noon of the 11th, but today will find many of the faithful gathering, and many are going to hang on for a day or two next week, for they come from far and near.

ACKERMAN

During the past two fairs special trains have been run from the Midwest. Johnny Mock's contingent from Pittsburgh is usually good for a whole car in addition to many who drive.

Boats from Solomons and Ridge will take parties down from this side if planned in advance, and will stay through the fair.

Black bass fishing in lake, stream and river is still decidedly off due to the hot weather. We can't see how it can improve until the cool nights of late August and early September, in spite of the reported catches of a few here and there. For river fishing a live smelt minnow is the bait, while for stream and the tidewater coves and creeks down the Potomac it is the fellow with the flyrod and bug who is bringing home that occasional fish.

In the lower Potomac the heat seems to have slowed the stripers also. Whether the dark and first quarter of the moon, which occurs this week and next, will have any effect on bettering the going is problematical because the one is as detrimental as the other is beneficial. A few hardheads are still being caught, but it is the succulent spot that has taken possession of the channels and ledges.

Night fishing still brings in the best catches, but first one must figure whether the going is going to be best in the evening or just before daylight. With the feeding hours changing almost daily it is difficult to do, so just get the old rabbit-foot out and hope for the best.

We fished Chincoteague with Stanley Turlington last week without the slightest sign of a nibble, but it was on the tail-end of a northeaster with a still falling barometer so there is nothing to complain about. Anyone with the slightest sense would never have gone out in the face of such odds, but we had to do something to work up an appetite for the stone crabs and Florida crawfish waiting for us at "Poor" Craigs Old Dominion Club on the point of the island.

Neither did we fare any better at Ocean City the following day, but the same two-day blow was responsible for that as well. It was not only successful in scattering the schools, but it seemed to have blown every last one of them far offshore.

Pepco Loses Government Lead, 7 to 5

Pepco yesterday relinquished first place in the Government League to Naval Air Station as the Union Printers administered them a 7-5 beating yesterday.

It was the second victory of the week for the Printers and primed them for the International Printers' Tournament starting next Monday in Cincinnati where they will be one of the favored outfits.

Pepco was limited to six hits by Mosedale and Doonis—who relieved him in the eighth. Mosedale was the winning pitcher in a game cut to eight innings by darkness.

The Printers, whose record is five won and five lost in the Government League, will probably start Willie Boteler, who pitched a one-hitter Tuesday, in the tournament's first game.

Co-Managers To Appear Here Today

Brody, Shepherd To Ask Inspection By Weights and Measures Body

A ruling that may entirely change the weighing-in of local boxers was tossed into local fistic circles yesterday, with the announcement from New York by George Shepherd and Leon Brody, comanagers of the Cocoa Kid, that they would demand an inspection of the scales by the weights and measures commission before the weigh-in Monday afternoon for the ten-rounder involving Georgie Abrams and Cocoa that night at the ball park.

Working on information gathered from other New York managers that the District boxing commission has been "too lax" in weighing-in main bout fighters, Shepherd and Brody stated that they would appear in town personally today to petition the boxing commission to have the scales "carefully checked."

"The Government had to legalize fighting in your town," Brody said last night, "and, therefore, the weights and measures commission ought to be glad to comply with my request."

Brody and Shepherd have a chance to collect a cool $500 from Chris Dundee as forfeit money in the event Abrams fails to make 160 by 2 p. m. Monday. They don't want any slip up, for as Brody put it, "we are going to protect our fighter, and see that Dundee doesn't put anything over on us."

Cocoa's managers will join him today and be on hand for a stiff workout he has slated today at 1:30 p. m. at Turner's Arena. The public has been invited.

in the third inning to up their lead to 3-1. It was Sam Chapman's homer far into the leftfield bleachers.

All of a sudden in the fifth the Nats came up with two runs to tie the score, thanks chiefly to Buddy Lewis. Monteagudo singled to right, and Case beat out a push bunt to McCoy. Whereupon Lewis banged a long triple to left center to score 'em. Walker and Travis left Lewis stranded on third.

Jimmy Pofahl put Monteagudo in trouble in the seventh by muffing Wagner's soft line drive, but when the A's threatened to get a cluster of runs, Pofahl redeemed himself with a sparkling fielding play. McCoy's single followed Pofahl's muff, and Lillard sacrificed the runners to second and third. The Nats got a break at this point when Caster lined a ball into Travis' glove. Rubeling followed with a hard grounder directly over second base that appeared laden with two runs, but Pofahl scampered behind the bag, made a one-hand pickup and got the ball to first for the side-ending out.

Ferrell Makes Weird Play

Rick Ferrell set in motion a run that put the Nats in a 4-3 lead in the seventh with a single to left. Monteagudo forced him on an attempted sacrifice, but Case's single to center—his third hit—moved Monteagudo to second. Lewis hit into a force play, but Gee Walker drove a ball past Lillard into center field to score the run.

Bill Beckman was the winning pitcher after relieving Caster at the start of the ninth. He was in trouble at the outset when Monteagudo, first up, reached base on a third strike that got away from Hayes, but after he was sacrificed to second neither Lewis nor Walker could move him home. In the tenth, Beckman struck out Travis and Bloodworth to seal his victory.

No Hitter Hurled

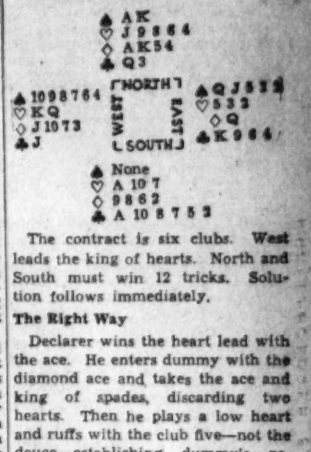
A's Recall Shortst...

Toronto, Aug. 8 (AP).—Fred Chapman, shortstop with Toronto in the International League, was recalled today by the Philadelphia Athletics.

Contract Bridge

At the Mayfair Bridge Club in New York, where most of the players are experts, many otherwise idle moments are passed in making up difficult hands. Here is one dreamed up by Harry J. Fishbein, one of the club's executives; see if you can solve it:

The cards:



The contract is six clubs. West leads the king of hearts. North and South must win 12 tricks. Solution follows immediately.

The Right Way

Declarer wins the heart lead with the ace. He enters dummy with the diamond ace and takes the ace and king of spades, discarding two hearts. Then he plays a low heart and ruffs with the club five—not the deuce—establishing dummy's remaining three hearts. He leads the seven of clubs, plays the queen, and East takes with the king. He has to return a spade, the least advantageous play to declarer. South ruffs the spade with the deuce of clubs, to bare himself down to the same number as East, and overruffs with dummy's club three. Hearts are led and East is cocupled. If he trumps the fourth round, declarer overruffs, draws East's remaining two trumps and enters dummy with the diamond king for one more heart trick. If East refuses to ruff when able, declarer simply keeps leading hearts until East is forced to undertrump anyway.

South makes six clubs, losing one club trick.

In the first six months of the year, the company took in $152,225,298 of new orders and issued billings for $46,838,891 of completed orders.

Bank Clearings Up 6.7% in Week

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Bank clearings for the week ended August 7 recorded wide gains over the preceding week's figure and the corresponding period last year, Dun & Bradstreet reported today.

Total clearances for 23 leading cities were $5,492,814,000, or 16.7 per cent more than the $4,707,341,000 for the same week a year ago, and $750,250,000 ahead of the previous weeks' volume.

New York's total was $3,209,535,000 against $2,758,985,000 a year ago. The 22 outside cities accounted for $2,283,279,000 against $1,948,356,000 last year.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Aug. 8 (AP).—Grain prices skidded easily downhill today as the trade looked on indifferently.

Led by corn which weakened after official weather forecasts had indicated scattered thunderstorms over much of the Middle West drought belt, all grain prices eased downward. Corn was off a cent a bushel and wheat almost as much. The bread grain dropping as much through indifference as through the effects of any important crop news.

Acute weakness of soybeans and lard, furnished late lights in trading. Soybeans were off as much as 3½ cents a bushel and lard declined 20 cents.

Corn closed only slightly above the day's lowest levels and ⅝@⅞ beneath yesterday's finish. September, 61; December, 58⅛@58⅜; wheat ¼@⅜ off; September, 74@73⅞; December, 74⅛@75; Oats, ¼ off; rove, ⅛@1 down; soybeans, 3¼@3½ lower, and lard, 20 down.

There was little in the news to encourage wheat operations. An official report placed the old crop carryover at 284,000,000 bushels, or about as expected, and added that the probable 1940 crop suggests that approximately 325,000,000 bushels may be on hand next July. Uncertainty over the European war situation also was a market deterrent.

Rye followed wheat. Oats maintained a relatively firm tone as cash interests absorbed hedging pressure.

Red Tape on Defense Jobs Clouds Outlook; Stocks Remain in Rut With Trade Timorous

New York, Aug. 8.—Stocks presented a diffident and generall unexciting aspect today with volume shrinking and trading timorous. Price changes were even smaller than has been usual this midsummer and losses and gains were in almost exact balance.

The assortment of influences that have been restricting security dealings and other forms of financial business all along were potent as ever.

Sharpshooters who seek to be first with knowledge about what are the best companies to follow during the defense program and business recovery period, were again hampered by the low visibility. Evidence appeared to be piling up that progress in providing the sinews of war is so far largely confined to descriptions of how efficient, how devastating and how expensive the arms and explosives will be, when and as they are made and delivered.

One authority emphasized that the public is under the impression that factories are turning out tanks, guns and ammunition in enormous quantities.

On the contrary, guns and many contracts although placed, are held up by official red tape, technicalities of various kinds relating to tax laws, and a desire by industrialists to receive an assurance of sufficient profit to cover war-time plant extentions and thus guarantee stockholders against blighting losses of the kind which occurred through the necessity of scrapping war-time equipment 20 years ago.

Industry may have pressing financial and production problems at this time but the chief concern of business men, it is generally felt, is to get started on making naval, military and aeronautical equipment required.

In this desire, no doubt, there is the motivating fear—based on past experience—that if the defensive program bogs down or fails in any particular, it will be the businessman and not the politician who will get the blame. Such fear could be more general because it is an election year.

Linked with this situation is a possibility that serious disruption to business, involving further delays, may occur as a result of steps being taken to break alleged "price control" in certain products; abrogation of cross-licensing arrangements, and the ironing out of technicalities connected with manufacturing here under foreign-owned patents.

Socony-Vacuum was the most active stock today at a small net loss but Studebaker, in second place, had a good rise. Curtiss-Wright, whose second quarter and six month earnings, out today, are a record for the company, sold actively at ¼ up. Republican Steel and Chrysler were other favorites to show moderate gains and coppers continued one of the most depressed groups.

Listed bonds were quiet and irregular with gains somewhat more numerous than losses. Almost all movements were fractional, and even the larger changes had little significance in view of the thin market. Turnover was only $2,950,000.

United States Treasury bonds resumed their slow decline, with the movement measured in smallest fractions. Best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds were virtually motionless.

Leaf Markets Open; Prices Show Climb

By the Associated Press

Valdosta, Ga., Aug. 8.—Releasing their first crop since warfare blanked out vital foreign markets, growers of flue-cured tobacco seemed generally pleased today with opening auction prices averaging 18 to 19 cents a pound.

Early reports from the 17 markets in the Georgia-Florida belt—first to test buyer reaction this year—indicated bids were running slightly higher than those for the opening day of last year, when the average was 15 to 18 cents.

Among bidders here were representatives of the Imperial Tobacco Co., big English firm that normally takes a large percentage of the cigarette type leaf, but it could not be determined what was to be done with the stacks they were buying.

There was no evidence of direct price bolstering by the Federal Government although the AAA has pledged assistance if the price falls below a 15-cent average.

Exchange Markets

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—The British pound slumped 4 cents in relation to the United States dollar in "free" foreign exchange trading today. Lack of demand for sterling was said to be the main reason for the fluctuation.

The Canadian dollar moved downward in sympathy, slipping .12½ of a cent at 86.75 United States cents.

The Shanghai and Hongkong dollars also declined slightly. Other world currencies were unchanged.

SEC Suspends Firm as 'Front' For Gianninis

Walston & Co., West Coast Brokers, Has Registration Revoked

By the Associated Press

The Securities Commission yesterday revoked the registration of Walston & Co., San Francisco investment house, and suspended for six months the Stock Exchange memberships of Vernon C. Walston and William Sherman Hoelscher, partners in the firm.

The order, based on charges of false and misleading statements in registering with the SEC, becomes effective September 10.

The SEC began its inquiry April 26, 1939, against Charles de Y. Elkus and Clifford P. Hofman, in addition to those named in yesterday's order.

It charged that the respondents were mere "fronts" for the Giannini banking interests on the West Coast, but sought to hide this relationship.

Giannini Accused

In an opinion, the SEC said:

"We are satisfied that, throughout the period in question, Virgil Giannini (son of A. P. Giannini, head of the family) wished to control a brokerage firm and also to keep such control secret. The record suggests that two major motives impelled Virgil Giannini to desire to control a seemingly independent brokerage house:

"(A) The Giannini family, chiefly Virgil Giannini's father and brother, were in control (or directed the market operations) of publicly owned corporations, including Trans-America Corporation, Bank of America, N. T. & S. A., and Pacific Coast Mortgage Co. Virgil Giannini may have desired to conceal the fact that a member of the Giannini family was, in effect, receiving a substantial profit from the commissions paid by these corporations to Walston & Co.

Active in Market

"(B) Throughout the period in question Virgil Giannini's father and brother were engaged in large-scale market operations, the purpose of which, according to the respondent's testimony, was to 'stabilize' or 'support the market' in the stock of Trans-America Corporation. It was unquestionably extremely useful to the Giannini family to control an ostensibly independent brokerage house through which to conduct these operations . . .

"However, whatever Virgil Giannini's motives may have been they were of sufficient strength to cause him to invest large sums of money in Walston & Co. and to resort to elaborate stratagems to conceal his interest.

"The record further establishes that Virgil Giannin, in effectuating his plan, received full cooperation from partners of Walston & Co. . . ."

The commission said that evidence showed that Virgil Giannini "for all practical purposes, owned from 70 per cent to 90 per cent of the firm," and that in addition he had advanced up to $120,000 as additional working capital.

Among those named in the original order, Hoffman was a son-in-law of A. P. Giannini and Elkus was the Giannini family lawyer.

Copper Price Cut To 10¾c a Pound

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Custom smelters and smaller producers lowered their price for copper today to 10¾ cents a pound, following a cut from 11½ to 11 cents by leading primary producers yesterday.

Smaller producers, in reducing their quotation, thereby resumed a dual price situation in the copper market, which, up to yesterday, had existed for seveal months. Leading producing interests adhere to the newly established price of 11 cents a pound.

New York Dry Goods

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Coarse goods again got most attention in the cotton cloth market today. However, Worth street reported covertlers' bids for print fabrics more active. Prices were unchanged and holding well.

Dealings were livelier in rayon goods as increased price basis. Demand improved as talk continued in some quarters of an increased price basis. Demand improved for full fashioned silk fabrics. Little activity outside of hand-to-mouth buying appeared in woolen goods.

Criticism of "Big Business" Declared Baiting and Unfair

By Merryle S. Rukeyser
Economic Commentator.

It is unrealistic to attempt to divide American business into two camps: Little business and big business. The falsity of this distinction was shown to the country several years ago when a convention of little business men complained about onerous taxation and political business baiting in precisely the same manner as big business.

Mr. Ruckeyser

A more significant classification sets up the criterion of good management, rather than size. As one goes around the country, especially into the smaller towns and villages during the vacation season, it becomes obvious that there is no monopoly of good management in business of any particular size.

In any venture, the unmistakable sign of competent management is recognition by those who own the enterprise that the customer is the boss. Where little economic acorns have evolved into great oaks, you can take it for granted that the management was animated by a zeal to serve customers.

On the other hand, numerous individuals drift into business on their own without the capacity and the temperament needed to succeed. They open up a gas station, or a roadside rest merely because some one suggested the idea or because they know of some one else who has succeeded in a similar activity. But they don't take the trouble to think through as to what it takes to succeed in business.

Where surly little business men deliberately insult customers, they unwittingly comprise an "economic suicide squad." For by their own misconduct or lack of charm, they are depriving themselves of what they are buying from the landlord.

In rent, the landlord charges not only the physical premises, but also for the access of a business location to traffic. The amount of rent is largely determined by the number of persons who pass the location each day.

Scientific renters, such, as the chain store enterprises, pick locations as a result of clocking the number of persons passing a given point in an hour. They also rela'e present activity to similar activity at the same location in the past in order to discover whether the district has a forward or a receding trend.

Now the business man who is inhospitable to strangers is deliberately throwing away his principal intangible asset; namely, the capacity of his location to attract customers. Knowing what a sensitive thing business success is, I am shocked to find inept little business men in an unfriendly, cold or even hostile mood toward those who come in to patronize them.

Many little business men, on the contrary, are friendly human beings, who succeed through sheer habit of thinking of the needs of the other fellow. Where efficiency is combined with kindliness, success is indicated.

The late Hubert Parson, one-time president of the F. W. Woolworth Co., used to tell me that little merchants could benefit from studying the merchandising policies, system of displays, and store policies of the well-managed chains. Great and well-managed enterprises, like the better department stores, envisage themselves primarily as service depots for their customers.

In view of the widespread myopia in respect to big business, which has been fomented by demagogues, it seems only fair to make it clear that there is no basis to the belief that big business is necessarily wicked, whereas small business is in the nature of things virtuous.

The presumption about any business that endures through the years is that it is rendering a service which its loyal customers appreciate.

Cotton Resists General Dip in Commodities

Gains 45c to 60c A Bale; Grains Off Fractionally

By the Associated Press

Traders' worries over future marketing outlets were reflected in another general sag in leading speculative commodity markets yesterday.

Cotton futures at New York resisted the broad trend and showed closing gains of 45 to 60 cents a bale, an expression of trade and spot house buying.

Chicago grains dipped. Wheat ended down ¼ to ¾ of a cent a bushel and corn was off ⅝ to ⅞ of a cent.

Sellers accepted lower prices for future contracts in Straits tin, Santos coffee, cottonseed oil, wool tops, sugar, rubber, silk and copper.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot commodities advanced, however, to 69.58 per cent of the 1926 average from 69.37 per cent yesterday.

Meanwhile, the Bureau of Labor Statistics yesterday reported a decline of 0.4 per cent in its index of wholesale commodity prices for the week ended August 3.

The decline sent the index down to 77 per cent of the 1926 average, the lowest level reached since early last September.

The bureau attributed the decline to lower prices for farm products, foods and hides and leather.

D. C. Women Bankers To Attend Convention

Buckingham, cashier and secretary of the City Bank of Washington; Mrs. Helena D. Reed, assistant trust officer of Lincoln National Bank, and Mrs. Vera W. Rhine, assistant vice president of the Morris Plan Bank of Washington. Miss Burwell is a member of the convention entertainment committee. Miss Reed is a member of the registration committee.

Cotton Futures

New York, Aug. 8 (AP).—Cotton distinguished itself today with a show of spirited strength amid general weakness in commodity futures markets.

Top gains of around $1 a bale were shaded by selling prompted by a bearish crop estimate, but despite this flurry the market remained steady to close 9 to 12 points higher.

The Census Bureau estimated the crop as of August 1 at 11,429,000 bales, compared with last year's harvest of 11,817,000. Trade circles said the figure was about 90,000 bales above the average of recent private estimates.

Worth street brokers reported an expanding interest in coarse yarn materials which are expected to figure in Government orders. Converter interest in print cloths also improved, but prices were reported slightly easier.

Foreign Markets

London, Aug. 8 (AP).—The stock market closed with a firm undertone but with quotations not much altered after a quiet opening which saw a number of deals down to the low levels of September.

British funds were steadier and in the industrial list tobacco shares improved.

Among mining issues Kaffirs retained some of their earlier losses and coppers were firmer. Oils and rubber were practically unchanged.

The invasion of British Somaliland contributed to the inertia and lower trend in prices.

Liverpool—Firmness of Egyptian cotton prompted scattered support in cotton futures today. Trade calling was a factor and prices finished at the day's best levels, 3 points higher to 1 lower.

Whenever you feel that little Willie has been asking too many questions, you may be able to cheer yourself with the philosophy that maybe he'll grow up to be like Parks Johnson and Wally Butterworth. Doing practically nothing else these past eight years, they've done pretty well for themselves—no question about it.

They're the two quizzical gentlemen you hear on the "Vox Pop" program over WJSV every Thursday night at 6:30. And at their steady job of questioning they meet a lot of interesting people. Last night, for instance, Madeleine Carroll was one of their interviewees when the broadcast came from Charlottesville, Va., in connection with the filming of "Virginia." We think Miss Carroll is pretty interesting.

That was their 527th broadcast and (who are we to shy at statistics), Miss Carroll was the 4,130th person they've interviewed since the program started in 1932. The number of questions they've asked amounts to well over a quarter of a million. Bet even little Willie can't top that, even though he may seem to at times.

You'd think Johnson and Butterworth knew all the answers by this time, but then, if they admitted it, they wouldn't meet Madeleine Carroll, would they?

5-Cent Milk Plan Starts Monday

2,500 Relief Clients Expected First Day At Beverage Depots

Status of the average relief family in Washington as compared with other cities will be tested Monday when the 5-cent milk plan for the needy goes into operation at 12 strategically located distributing stations.

As plans for the milk distribution were completed yesterday welfare officials wondered how many of the 12,000 needy families who have received cards will take advantage of the opportunity to buy milk at the reduced rate.

Director of Public Welfare Robert Bondy reminded reliefers that a 3-cent bottle deposit will be required at the first purchase. The 3 cents is going to make a lot of difference to many relief families, Bondy admitted. After the initial 3-cent investment the client escapes the toll by returning the bottles.

Another reminder is that the distributing stations located at two fire stations, two police stations, and seven schools, will not furnish containers. The centers in general will be adorned with only one piece of furniture—a counter. Clients will get the milk on the cash and carry basis and must bring their own paper bags, baskets, or carts. Milk will be stacked around the room in ice-filled boxes keeping it at a temperature of less than 50 degrees.

Director of the project is David W. Miller, head of the surplus commodities department of the Board of Welfare. The plan which has been introduced through the surplus marketing division of the United States Department of Agriculture, is in effect in Chicago, Boston and New Orleans.

Local officials expect only about 2,500 will respond to the plan on Monday, but nearly all needy families in the District are expected to be taking advantage of the offer by the end of the month.

Persons who are on relief or who are working on WPA projects are eligible for the milk cards.

Certification of those eligible is handled by Otto Cass, director of the Public Assistance Division of the Board of Welfare. Applicants are asked to register at 476 C street northwest, which is the central distributing point.

Clients must bring their signed cards to the nearest distributing center where three WPA workers and a dairy official will check the quantity of milk alloted to each person. The general rule is one pint daily for each member of the family under 17 and half a pint for those over that age. Special allowances will be made, however, for expectant mothers and those with dietary requirements prescribed by a doctor. The centers will be closed on Sundays and holidays.

Flynn Plans Five Regional Headquarters

Chairman Proposes To Decentralize Drive Activities

By Cecil B. Dickson.

International News Service Staff Writer.

Decentralization of the Democratic National Committee's activities for the Roosevelt-Wallace campaign was proposed to New Deal leaders yesterday by the incoming national chairman, Edward J. Flynn.

The new strategy calls for the creation of five regional offices in as many sections of the country. Each regional office, according to the tentative plan, would be headed by a leading New Dealer of the respective area.

Formal announcement of the plan will be withheld until Flynn actually takes over the chairmanship August 17 when the resignation of Chairman James A. Farley becomes effective.

Luncheon at Capitol

It was proposed by Flynn, who is here getting acquainted with his job, at a luncheon in a private dining room in the Capitol. The luncheon was attended by Senator Byrnes, of South Carolina, Roosevelt floor manager at the Chicago convention; Senator O'Mahoney, of Wyoming; House Majority Leader Sam Rayburn, of Texas, and Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt, of Indiana.

Flynn, Democratic leader in The Bronx and former Secretary of State in New York, also conferred with other New Deal leaders, some of whom said they urged that President Roosevelt stump the country during the final weeks of the campaign in October.

Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, who yesterday predicted Mr. Roosevelt would defeat the G. O. P. nominee, Wendell L. Willkie, said the President "should make a swing around the country and let the people look at him."

The announcement at Hyde Park that Farley resigned his Postmaster Generalship, effective September 1, long expected here, was received with regret, especially among old-line Democrats.

Voicing the sentiment of many Democrats, Speaker of the House Bankhead said:

"I have always had great admiration for Jim Farley. He has made an excellent record as Democratic chairman and Postmaster General and I deeply regret his departure from official life in Washington."

Reports that Flynn would make a sweeping reorganization of the national committee machinery were discounted by New Dealers. All of the present officers and employes are Farley people. New Dealers said they are anxious to keep Farley appeased during the campaign by keeping his friends in the organization.

Despite this, it was understood that L. W. "Chip" Robert, secretary, and Oliver Quayle, treasurer, would be expected to tender their resignations when Flynn takes over on August 17.

French Supreme Court Convenes to Begin Trial of Former Leaders for War Blame

By P. J. Philip

Copyright by New York Times

Riom, France, Aug. 8.—With dignity, calm and notable expedition, the supreme court of the French state was constituted in the appeal court of the old Palais de Justice here today to begin the greatest political trial in French history.

Former leaders of the nation, as yet officially not named, will face the court, to be accused of plunging France into war without preparation or failing to save the country after war had begun.

The exact charges have not been announced, and may not be until the secret trial has ended.

This was no revolutionary court, like the one which tried King Louis XVI and Marie Antoinette. The men who sat today on the judges' bench have been chosen for their rectitude, their known character and experience. On them has been placed a tremendous responsibility and in the quick proceedings of this formal opening ceremony the tension of that responsibility was fully apparent.

This is going to be neither a court of summary justice nor one of those long drawn-out investigations which end nowhere. Whatever the final judgment and whoever may be judged, it is already evident from the choice of judges and their manner of approach to their difficult task that their aim will be to establish the truth and not to conduct any political prosecution.

Today there was neither accusation nor accused. The whole business was the formal constitution of the court.

The judges wore their robes and uniforms. President Pierre F. Caoux wearing an ermine mantle with the bright red ribbon of a commander of the Legion of Honor around his neck. Gen. Wateau and Admiral Herr were in uniform, the others in the robes of their status as members of the bar.

In the well of the court, Minister of Justice Raphael Alibert sat on a chair facing the judges. Behind him were the judges and lawyers of the appeal and assize courts of Auvergne. On one side were three substitute judges and on the other the prosecutor, Gen. Cassagnau, and advocates Gabolde and Bruzin.

Two or three hundred members of the public and press formed the audience.

In the courtyard and on the stairway a guard of honor was drawn up and at 4 o'clock precisely the call, "present arms," was given in the court room, announcing the Minister of Justice.

As soon as he had taken his seat an usher announced, "the Supreme Court," and the seven judges and three substitutes filed in.

President Caoux asked that decrees constituting the court and summoning it to this first session should be read by the court clerk, M. Jardel, who did so, slowly and clearly.

Then came the solemn moment when, in turn, the judges, advocates and court clerk took the oath:

"Do you swear well and faithfully to fulfill your functions, to guard religiously the secret of your deliberations and to comport yourselves in every way as a worthy and loyal magistrate?"

In a clear and intelligible voice, President Caoux and the others, standing up, replied, "je le jure"—"I swear it."

Turning to the public prosecutor, General Cassagnau, the President asked if he had any business to present to the court and got the reply that in a few days an act of accusation would be prepared and submitted.

The court adjourned then until an unnamed date.

Ex-U. S. Clerk Given Hearing in London Court

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Aug. 8.—Charges under the official secrets act against Tyler Kent, a former United States embassy clerk, who was detained two months ago by order of the Home Office, were heard secretly today.

A young woman, Anna Wolkoff, daughter of Admiral Nicholas Wolkoff, who has been interned, was charged with Kent as codefendant.

The proceedings lasted an hour and a half and afterwards the clerk said that the hearing had been adjourned until August 19.

The names of Kent and Miss Wolkoff were deleted afterward from a charge sheet hung up in the lobby of the court for the information of the public.

Pilot Dies to Keep Ship From Crashing in Town

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

London, Aug. 8.—The pilot of a British fighter plane gave his life today in order to prevent his machine, blazing after a battle with a score of Germans over the Channel, from falling into the center of a southeast coast town.

As the British craft came low over thickly populated streets, it seemed certain to crash on houses. The pilot stuck to the controls and flew out toward the sea. His flaming machine plunged into the water a bare 50 yards from shore. Almost immediately the gasoline tanks blew up. Motorboats sped up, but found no trace of the pilot's body.
